RAINEY AGAINST FURTHER CUT IN FEDERAL WAGES

Senate Economy Plan of 1 2-3 Per Cent Faces House Battle.

SAVINGS ESTIMATE SAGS TO $16,000,000

Senator Oddie, Foe of Slash, Will Report to Floor on Monday.

By ROBERT C. ALBRIGHT.

House Democratic Floor Leader Henry T. Rainey will throw the weight of his influence against House acceptance of the Senate economy committee's proposed 1 2-3 per cent additional reduction in Federal employes' pay.

"We can get along without cutting salaries any more than we have," he said last night. "We have cut them enough already."

He would make no comment on other provisions of the retrenchment program, which Senator Hiram Bingham, in revised estimates yesterday, said would net the Federal Treasury $37,000,000. Rainey said he wanted first to study the report, and Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell took the same position. Snell reserved his views on the additional pay cut.

Rainey's Flat Statement.

But the Democratic floor leader, who believes Congress was compelled to make the last salary cut to meet a public demand, fears salary reduction policies if continued will extend a vicious circle that might interfere with the functions of Government.

Informed on his return from New York yesterday of the Senate economy committee's pay-cut proposal, Representative Rainey said flatly:

"We are not going to accept that. I will do what I can to stop it."

He will have the support of a wide group in the House who believe the 8 1-3 per cent pay-cut extension approved by that chamber is as far as Congress should go in the direction of salary reduction.

Fight in Senate Monday.

They will include Chairman James M. Mead of the House postoffice committee, Chairman William P. Connery, Jr., of the House labor committee, Representatives John J. Boylan and Anthony J. Griffin (Democrats), New York, and Representative Fiorello H. LaGuardia, New York Progressive.

A fight will open in the Senate Monday, when the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill, carrying the economy rider, is reported to the Senate by Senator Tasker L. Oddie (Republican), Nevada, chairman of the Senate Treasury-Postoffice appropriations subcommittee.

Senator Oddie himself is hostile to the additional pay cut, but the Senate economy committee's report was not referred directly to his subcommittee. It was referred first to the full Senate appropriations committee, which approved it over his head.

The Oddie subcommittee finished marking up the Treasury-Postoffice phase of the bill yesterday and will

Catholic U. Campus Menaced as Flames Hit McMahon Hall

McMahon Hall Catholic University was swept by flames which broke out early today on the third floor, which is occupied by the biological laboratory, the historical museum and classrooms. The origin of the fire is unknown, although incendiarism is suspected.

The fire was discovered at 1:40 a. m. by Harry Grove, special policeman, as he was making his nightly round of inspection. He pulled a private fire-box. Fearing that many of the valuable paintings, including a picture of Cardinal Gibbons, were endangered, he ran to Caldwell Hall, a dormitory, for help.

On the second floor of the dormitory, he saw a well-dressed man, wearing a derby, loitering in the hall. He placed the man under arrest.

In the meantime, students and priests rushed to the administration building and rescued the painting of Cardinal Gibbbons.

Although the second alarm brought eight fire engines and three trucks to the fire, another alarm was sounded. The flames rapidly gained headway.

The flames soon broke through the walls into the auditorium, but students also rescued valuable paintings, including portraits of Pope Leo XIII, George Washington and Bishop Carroll, the first bishop of the United States.

Inquiry Started as Sabotage Is Suspected; Thousands Attracted to Scene.

A spectacular fire, raging out of control for more than half an hour, early last night swept through construction work atop the new Interstate Commerce Commission Building, Twelfth street and Constitution avenue northwest, sent huge burning planks hurtling through space and presented a problem in firefighting long unequaled in the District's history.

Government and construction company officials last night were working on the theory that the blaze was "a plain case of sabotage." A few moments before the fire was discovered, watchmen on the grounds chased a shabbily dressed man, who was found loitering at the building's entrance. The chase led in and out among steel girders, but the fleeing man vaulted a fence and disappeared.

The flames were first seen shortly before 6 o'clock by Frank Mullen, a watchman. He hurried to a telephone and summoned the Fire Department. First firemen to arrive immediately sounded an alarm from a street corner box.

The blaze meanwhile had gained great headway and raged beyond control eight stories in the air.

The problem then was to reach the flames with lines of hose. Other companies arriving launched themselves into the task of hoisting lines up the eight floors of steel construction work, but it was twenty minutes before streams of water played on the blaze.

As dusk fell the fire could be seen throughout the city. A red glow in the sky attracted thousands of persons, who lined the streets for blocks around.

Burning timber dropped from the roof to crash with resounding roars on the newly laid foundation below. Firemen fought in total darkness amid steel girders and scaffolding, attempting to reach the upper floors. Although the burning embers struck on all sides of a company working within the building, no injuries were reported.

James C. Stewart, president of the Stewart Construction Co., erecting the new building, arrived before the flames were under control. He expressed indignation at the way firemen ware handling the blaze, and urged fire officials to call more men.

As he stood near his office at the base of the building, Mr. Stewart re-

B. E. F. Leaves Chicago For Kansas City Base

Kansas City, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—M. B. Beck, who described himself as national field commander of the Bonus Expeditionary Forces, said here today his organization, members of which were evicted from Washington, had moved its headquarters to Kansas City from Chicago in order to be more centrally located.

Beck said W. W. Waters, commander in chief, would arrive here either January 15 or 16. Waters has been in Miami, Fla., writing a history of the B. E. F. The organization has no plans at present, Beck said, other than to increase its membership. "He estimated its present total at 10,000.

Roosevelt Expresses Sympathy in Telegram

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Before leaving for his home at Hyde Park today President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt sent a telegram of condolence to Mrs. Calvin Coolidge.

"Mrs. Roosevelt and I offer our sincere sympathy in the great sorrow that has come to you so suddenly," the telegram read. "It is with real regret that I find it impossible to accompany Mrs. Roosevelt and James to Northampton for the funeral."

DEBTS PARLEY DATE IN NEW YORK FIXED

Roosevelt and Stimson Plan to Hold Conference Sunday or Monday.

By HAROLD J. T. HORAN.

President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt and Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson have finally fixed the date of their conference. Last Wednesday President Hoover received the formal request from his successor for an opportunity of reviewing the problems incident to the foreign policy of the United States with the Secretary of State.

The time and place of the meeting were not revealed either here or in New York, but it is believed that the consultation will take place on Sunday or Monday in New York. Secretary Stimson felt that as he is merely the guest and President-elect Roosevelt the host, it was for the President-elect to make the announcement. Mr. Roosevelt in his present role of private citizen, expressed a similar reluctance.

Secretary Stimson left last night for Plymouth, to attend the funeral of former President Coolidge. The Roosevelt-Stimson conference will take place after the Coolidge funeral. The subject matter of the conference transcends, however, any considerations of date or place. Ever since the day after election, Secretary Stimson has made obvious his anxiety for an opportunity of putting before the incoming President the panorama of the foreign situation.

Looming largely in the foreground of the agenda for the meeting will be the subject of war debts. The recent debate in the Senate blew off the lid which had clamped on the subject at the request of Col. Stimson himself.

Plea to Suppress Navy Paper Denied

Report on Relations of Two Couples in 1931 Stands in Suit.

Baltimore, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The appeal for suppression of a confidential naval report made by the Secretary of the Navy through United States District Attorney Simon E. Sobeloff, who asked Federal Judge William C. Coleman for an injunction against papers filed in a libel suit, was refused today.

The report, which the Government said might bring strained relations between this country and a foreign nation, was made by Lieut. Comdr. Leon W. McGrath in January, 1931. It gave an analysis of relations between Commander McGrath, his wife, and Commander and Mrs. Alfred Hart Miles.

Mrs. Miles has entered suit against McGrath for $25,000, charging him with libeling her. Both families were stationed in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, at the time the report was made.

Slayer's Gun Jams And Halts Suicide

Petersburg Woman, 22, Is Shot; Man Says She Troubled Him.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Harry Dearing, 32, who today shot and killed Ethel Stocktown, 22, with whom he had been living, told police that he committed the act because "she had given me a lot of trouble."

He said he had intended a second bullet for himself but was unable to carry out his suicide plan when the pistol jammed. Police who examined the weapon found it had jammed after firing the first shot.

HOPES FOR HIGH TAX ABANDONED BY DEMOCRATS

Opposition to Roosevelt Plan Ends Prospect of Quick Action.

GARNER AND RAINEY TO FIGHT INCREASE

By LAWRENCE SULLIVAN.

All hope for budget-balancing tax legislation at the short session of Congress was abandoned by Democratic leaders of the House yesterday following development of vigorous opposition to the proposal for a general increase in income levies, as suggested in the New York conference Thursday night between President-elect Roosevelt and his party chieftains on Capitol Hill.

While Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, ranking Democratic member of the Senate finance committee, announced he would call his party colleagues on the committee together early next week to prepare for enactment of the Roosevelt program, Speaker Garner and Democratic Leader Rainey, in the House, publicly announced their opposition to higher income tax rates.

Rainey Plans Fight.

"There may be such legislation enacted in the present session," Representative Rainey said, "but not if I can prevent it."

Speaker Garner said there appears to be no hurry about calling the House ways and means committee together to consider the New York conference plan. He added he had still another revenue proposal in reserve, which probably would be "a lot less painful."

At the same time, Chairman Collier, of the ways and means committee, said no arrangements yet had been made for assembling the committee to begin tax hearings. Meanwhile the hearings on the sales tax, scheduled to begin January 4, but abandoned when the New York conference developed, are to be suspended until Chairman Collier is satisfied there is something like a general agreement among party leaders as to the bill.

Acknowledge Despair.

In view of the new rift between the House and Senate Democrats, as revealed in yesterday's comment on the New York discussions, several influential members of Mr. Collier's committee acknowledged privately last night that nothing could be accomplished in the remaining 40 days of the short session.

Despite the general confusion as to details of their budget program,

RENEWAL OF BATTLE BELIEVED IMMINENT

Chang Moving Picked Men to Seized City; Tokyo Charges Marauding.

Shanghai (Saturday), Jan. 7 (A.P.).—The foreign office indicated today that in view of conflicting Chinese and Japanese claims concerning the Japanese occupation of Shanhaikwan and the apparently short-lived hostilities near its sister city of Chinwangtao, the National government has asked American and British legations to send military observers there "in order to obtain the facts."

The National government also said that the British charge d'affaires had directed the attention of both the Chinese and Japanese governments to the British interests in Chinwangtao, the port city a few miles from Shanhaikwan, which earlier this week was taken by the Japanese.

The British official requested that the two governments guard against any activities which might jeopardize the British interests.

The National government also said that the British consider "the growing seriousness of the Chinwangtao situation as necessitating this reminder."

Reinforcements Dispatched.

Peiping, China, Jan. 6 (U.P.).—Renewal of fighting in north China between Chinese and Japanese forces around Shanhaikwan, below the Great Wall, was feared imminent tonight as the Chinese rushed reinforcements into the war zone.

The young Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, in command in the Peiping-Tientsin area, moved picked men toward the Japanese positions. The maneuver was regarded as evidence the Chinese intended to launch a counter-offensive in an effort to recapture Shanhaikwan.

Observers in Tientsin and Peiping, nearest the Shanhaikwan battle front, feared a renewal of the conflict. They said it was almost inevitable, in view of the attitude and troop movements on both sides.

Charges of Marauding.

In the south, Marshal Chiang Kai-Shek, military leader in the Nanking regime and most powerful chieftain in China, was preparing for action, dispatches related. He sent word to

New York Cuts Wages; $18,000 Judge Balks

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The board of estimate adopted pay-cut schedules today reducing the 1933 budget by $19,112,068, and a few minutes later Chief Justice Frederick Kernochan of the Court of Special Sessions announced that he would not voluntarily accept the proposed slash in his $18,000 salary.

The resolution making the cuts effective was introduced by Mayor John P. O'Brien. The salary cuts range from 6 to 33.9 per cent. Salaries below $2,000 were not affected.

Girl Murdered and Fiance Hurt by Park Marauders

Her Body Is Found in Philadelphia; Companion, Discovered Wandering Streets in Daze, Unable to Shed Light on Mysterious Attack.

Philadelphia, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Her throat cut and head badly battered, Rose McCloskey, 19-year-old unemployed sales girl, was found dead today under a twin catalpa tree in Fairmount Park.

The girl met death after starting out for a walk with Dennis Boyle, 30, said by friends to be her fiance, who was found later staggering about a West Philadelphia street, dazed and unable to tell what happened. He lost consciousness in a hospital before making a statement.

A park guard, taking a short cut through a gravel dump less than 300 yards from a busy intersection leading into the park, stumbled over the girl's body. A cursory investigation showed that she had been assailed by at least two men, battered about the head with rocks and apparently killed with knife thrusts on the throat.

Boyle, a former doorman at a theater in New York, had been beaten about the head with rocks. An X-ray examination was made to see whether his skull was fractured.

Police believe that after leaving friends last night Miss McCloskey and Boyle went to the park and sat on one of three benches that were drawn end to end behind a pile of gravel about 15 feet high.

From footprints, detectives found that at least two persons were on top of the gravel mound, waiting until Boyle and the girl had their backs turned. The men, police said, apparently jumped from the top of the mound and landed directly behind the bench. Four deep imprints in the gravel were the basis for this police theory.

At one end of the bench, matted with blood, were strands of Miss McCloskey's hair.

The condition of the ground indicated a struggle had ensued. Ten feet from the benches was one of

RITES FOR COOLIDGE TODAY TO BE SIMPLE; PRESIDENT EN ROUTE

Curtis Is Among Leaders Going To Rites.

CAPITOL HILL SENDS GROUP

Congress Adjourns in Respect; Eulogies Continue.

(Associated Press.)

President Hoover and many more of the Government's mighty set out last night upon the sorrowful mission of attending the funeral of Calvin Coolidge, symbolizing at the services the grief of the Nation.

A special train left the Capital shortly after midnight to take to Northampton these officials and friends of the former President, leaving after a day in which his memory was signally honored—by adjournment of the Senate until Monday, and by a steady stream of eulogies and tributes from at home and abroad.

Vice President Curtis was one of the party, heading a delegation of 25 from the Senate. It was from Curtis' place that Coolidge was elevated to the Presidency, and the senators who sat under him felt his loss with special keenness.

Other Leaders to Attend.

The head of the Nation's judiciary, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, and Justice Stone turned toward Northampton. Both were in the Coolidge Cabinet, one as Secretary of State, the other as Attorney General.

With them were a number of the Hoover Cabinet and other officials. Still another delegation was assigned from the House.

The Senate session yesterday was the most striking of the day's tributes to the late former President. It had adjourned Thursday literally aghast and unthinking of anything except the sudden loss. So yesterday there remained the duty of assigning senators to the funeral party.

A prayer and an eulogy of Mr. Coolidge were heard from the Rev. Z. E. Barney Phillips, chaplain of the Senate. The President's formal notification of the death was then read and a resolution of sorrow, proposed by Senator Walsh, a Democrat from the Coolidge State, Massachusetts, was adopted. No word of the ordinary business of the chamber was uttered.

The House had complied with the formalities Thursday and, with a pressing burden of work, chose to proceed with debate, but Speaker Garner announced there would be no session today, in honor of Mr. Coolidge's memory.

The diplomatic corps sent its dean, Paul Claudel of France, to express to Mr. Hoover its condolences. Then one after another the ambassadors

Cellar Prisoner, 22, Is Freed by Police

Cincinnati Father Sought After Victim Tells of Family Hatred.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 6 (U.P.).—A 22-year-old youth who said he had been kept a virtual prisoner by his father in the cellar of his home for 30 months was found and released today by Cincinnati police.

The youth, Arthur Doebrich, was found huddled on a coal pile, his clothing in rags, his beard grown long and his hair, matted and unkempt, dropping to his shoulders.

Police immediately began a search for the father, Adolph Doebrich, a tile fitter.

The boy told detectives that his father had developed a deep hatred against himself, his mother and an elder sister, and kept them in a constant state of terror by his threats.

Former B. E. F. Leader Jailed in Baltimore

Baltimore, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Wayland R. Kearns, former "judge advocate" of the bonus expeditionary force during its encampment in Maryland, today was sentenced to 30 days in jail on a charge of sending an obscene letter through the mail.

Mrs. Maude Edgell, of Catonsville, who brought the charge, refused to testify against him. Mrs. Edgell last summer provided 25 acres of land in Anne Arundel County for veterans, including Kearns, after they were driven from Washington. Kearns pleaded guilty to the charge in Federal Court.

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 6 (U.P.).—Down a side street, in a little basement shop, James Lucey, shoemaker, sat today, waiting for cement on a leather heel to dry.

He stood in front of his last because folks drifting into his shop sometimes thoughtlessly leaned on it and spoiled the contour of the heel.

A few hours before, trembling with the palsy of age, he had stood over the bed which contained the body of Calvin Coolidge, thirtieth President of the United States. Mr. Coolidge had called him his "guide, philosopher and friend." When Mr. Coolidge became the thirtieth President of the United States his first letter from the

NO WILL BELIEVED MADE BY COOLIDGE

Business Associates Are Not Aware of Any Testament Drawn by Leader.

Boston, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The possibility that Calvin Coolidge died without making a will was disclosed tonight by business associates of the former President. Ralph W. Hemenway, Northampton lawyer and former partner of Mr. Coolidge, said that no will had been drawn so far as he knew and that he did not believe members of Mr. Coolidge's family knew of the existence of any such document.

Hemenway was a close friend of Mr. Coolidge for many years and the former President had shared an office with the lawyer up to the time of his death.

Harry Ross, secertary to Mr. Coolidge, said the matter of a will never had been discussed with him.

John G. Sargent, of Ludlow, Vt., a friend of the former President for many years and former Attorney General, was so ill tonight he could not be questioned concerning the will, but his associate, Paul Chase, said the subject never had been discussed in the office and he did not know a will ever had been drawn.

If Mr. Coolidge died intestate he would leave two heirs, his widow, Mrs. Grace Coolidge, and his only surviving son, John. His only other near relatives were an aunt, Miss Sarah Pollard, of Proctorville, Vt., now approaching 100 years of age, and an uncle, Hiram Moor, 85, a rice planter of Welsh, La., who was a brother of Mr. Coolidge's mother.

New Charge Filed Against Halloran

Accessory to Murder Is Count in Arizona Trunk Slaying.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—John J. Halloran must face a new charge as "accessory to the crime of murder," Superior Judge Howard C. Speakman ruled today in sustaining the wealthy lumberman's demurrer to a grand jury indictment against him. Halloran's bond of $3,000 was continued.

The court found that the true bill—returned after the grand jury had listened to Winnie Ruth Judd's alleged "whole truth" story—to be defective in that it failed to state facts constituting a public offense by Halloran, in the "trunk murder" case. Judge Speakman declined, however, to quash the charge.

Will Rest Beside Father and Son In Vermont.

BODY WILL LIE HOUR IN STATE

Former President Is Believed Not to Have Made Will.

Northampton, Mass., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Calvin Coolidge lay tonight in the home where he died so suddenly yesterday, in the town where he had started his career as a young lawyer.

Tomorrow he goes back into the Vermont hills to Plymouth, his native hamlet, there to rest beside his father and his son.

Simple services will mark his departure from the city he came to as a young man and leaves as a former President of the United States.

President and Mrs. Hoover and scores of other important personages will attend the services. Most of the money marts of the country will be closed. The National Congress will not convene. Cannons will boom a requiem at the military posts throughout the Nation.

Simple Rites Planned.

And, in comparison, the services for the former President will last no longer than 25 minutes at the most. Only three pieces of music will be included in the ceremonies. There will be no eulogy, no address, with strict simplicity the keynote.

There in Plymouth, the little hamlet of seven dwellings, his body will be laid to rest in a grave on the sloping hillside where others of his family lie. Childhood friends and old neighbors will stand with heads bowed, as he had stood in 1924, when his son, Calvin, was buried, and two years later when his father was interred.

The simplicity of the service in Jonathan Edwards Congregational Church follows the wishes of Mrs. Coolidge. She herself chose two of the three musical selections that will have their place in the program. They were selections both she and Mr. Coolidge liked—a prelude from "The New World Symphony," and "Oh, Love that Will not Let Me Go." The third piece will be "Lead, Kindly Light," and will be sung by the church quartet.

Moving Mountain Puts Crack in Cliff's Face

Durango, Colo., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—A spectacular crack occurred today on the sandstone picture cli of Carbon Mountain, making a fissure 18 inches wide. This was accompanied by trembling of the peak, whose antics in the last few weeks have engaged the puzzled attention of geologists.

The fissure occurred half way between the valley floor and the top of the mountain. Immediately afterward the mountain moved sufficiently to break the ground line at its north base. Observers estimated 2,500,000 tons of earth and rock have come down the sides of the mountain in the last week. The dirt is piled 30 feet deep in a gulch.

R.F.C. PLANS REPORT AIRING LOAN ITEMS

Demand by House Will Give Details in Opposition to Own Stand.

(Associated Press.)

In response to a demand from the House, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, always opposed to publishing the details of its loans, last night prepared to report its early transactions, heretofore not divulged.

Climaxing a long and bitter fight between advocates and opponents of publicity for the corporation's affairs, the House yesterday asked the organization to tell it just where $1,054,814,485, loaned between February and June of last year, had gone. This information will be made public by the House.

Soon after word of the House action reached the corporation, its officers went into conference on the steps to be taken. If the data requested has not yet been compiled, a week or two will be needed to get it together.

Most of it, however, already has been supplied to the Senate committee, headed by Couzens, of Michigan, which was named to investigate the corporation. That committee has indicated it was about to approve the activities of the corporation.

Due principally to the insistence of Speaker Garner, loans since July have been made public. He and supporters of the position he took encountered strong opposition from President Hoover and from members of the corporation itself. Yesterday's House action was taken at the urging of Representative Howard (Democrat), Nebraska, who had the backing of Garner and other Democratic leaders. Howard's resolution directed the corporation to give full data on loans made in the first five months of its operations, including "the names and addresses of the borrowers and prospective borrowers."

Wagner Wants Liberalization.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, announced in the Senate yesterday that he would introduce a bill Monday to liberalize the law under which the corporation administers relief. Among the changes he proposes are: Removal of the limitation of $300,000,000 for direct relief loans to States; authorization of long term loans to States; removal of the self-liquidating requirement on construction loans, and lowering of interest rates.

The New York senator said the changes were necessary to clear a path "through the undergrowth of technicalities and delays which have well-nigh smothered" the relief act.

Speaks for "Taxpayers."

Representative Bankhead (Democrat), Alabama, replied that the taxpayers had a right to know "what has been done with their money."

Howard reminded the House that Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, had suggested in the Senate an inquiry into the corporation's affairs. He said he consulted Norris on the wording of his resolution.

"Perhaps the corporation has conducted its affairs wisely," Howard said. "If so there will be no need for an inquiry and some of these ugly rumors and hideous suspicions will be set at rest."

The corporation's records show that the bulk of the money loaned before July, $642,789,000, went to 3,600 banks and trust companies. In the first five months of its operations, $213,832,000 was loaned to 38 railroads. No names of borrowers were given.

6,300 Families Here Facing Dire Want for Necessities Unless Congress Passes Relief Appropriation Now in Its Hands.

Leroy A. Halbert, director of unemployment relief under the Board of Public Welfare, yesterday announced that no more work cards could be issued pending the receipt of additional funds from Congress, and that practically all funds for relief will be exhausted with the meeting of a pay roll of $18,500 today.

Unless the Senate passes early next week the pending bill for $625,000, already adopted by the House, some 6,300 families heretofore meagerly cared for by the Welfare Board will be destitute, according to Mr. Halbert. The majority of men and women employed by the District Committee on Employment concluded work yesterday, and all made work will end Monday night.

There will be one more pay roll after today, next Saturday, when about $7,000 will be paid out for labor today and Monday. This expenditure, together with the semimonthly administration pay roll on January 16, will exhaust the $450,000 relief fund, which included $100,000 donated by the Community Chest.

Today's pay roll will provide for most of the relief dependent families through next week, Mr. Halbert explained, but there will be nothing for them for the following week. This schedule of expenditures, he said, is in accord with the plan mapped by the special unemployment relief committee of the Welfare Board the latter part of December. At that time it was said the fund could be extended no further than January 14.

To make the rapidly dwindling fund last this long the relief organization has had to slash each family's share three times until now it is but $3.70 a week for four persons.

If the additional relief fund is not forthcoming by the end of next week, the relief organization of welfare workers and investigators formed by Mr. Halbert will have to be disbanded. Even though the bill is passed by the Senate and signed by the President next week, the relief organization will have to issue grocery orders for most of the families when the men and women are put back to work, Mr. Halbert said, as they will be unable to wait for the next pay day.

DEMOCRATS DESPAIR OF TAX ACTION AT SHORT SESSION

however, the Democratic spokesmen on both sides of the Capitol insisted yesterday they would somehow strike a balance between revenues and expenditures for the 1934 fiscal year. On the necessity for this policy there appears to be absolute unanimity of opinion. Mr. Roosevelt insists upon it, say those who conferred with him in New York.

Chairman Byrnes of the House appropriations committee anticipates that by reducing expenditures $100,000,000 below President Hoover's estimates the budget can be balanced by the beer and gasoline taxes.

Together these two items would yield approximately $250,000,000 in new revenue. But the prospective of a White House veto for the beer bill in its present form reduces by $125,000,000 the prospect for actual revenue from this two-way program.

Failure of the beer bill would leave a deficit of $225,000,000 in the 1934 budget. But this shortage of revenue now promises to be further increased by the failure of some of the principal economy recommendations included in the President's budget message.

Action Seems Unlikely.

It already appears unlikely that action will be taken on the proposal to slash $127,000,000 from veteran expenditures. The failure of the 10 per cent pay cut plan takes another $50,000,000 from the proposed savings. Finally there is the item of $328,000,000 in foreign debt payments which now must be stricken from the income figures for 1934 in any realistic appraisal of the budget outlook.

Taking all of these items into consideration, the 1934 deficit now stands at $730,000,000—if additional revenues are not to be provided.

Paring departmental allowances as the various annual supply bills go through the legislative mill is expected by Chairman Byrnes of the appropriations committee to reduce this prospective deficit by perhaps $100,000,000. But even should the revival of business bring another $100,000,000 in taxes on the present rates, the actual deficit in Mr. Roosevelt's first administrative year would be something more than $500,000,000.

Roosevelt Firm for Boost.

This is the gap which must be spanned by new taxes if there is to be a real balancing of the budget. But no one on Capitol Hill now will venture a prophecy that legislation will be passed at the short session to provide anything like this sum.

Meanwhile, word from Hyde Park last night was to the effect that Mr. Roosevelt is standing firmly on the general proposal for increased income taxes. It was said in his behalf, however, that he is willing to leave all details of the matter to the Democratic leaders in the House and Senate.

Questioned concerning the probability of a special session soon after March 4, Representative Rainey said yesterday that while every one appeared opposed to such a move, an early assemblage of the Roosevelt Congress appeared inevitable. Chairman Collier agreed.

"If President Hoover vetoes the beer bill he must accept full responsibility for unbalancing the 1934 budget," said Mr. Collier. "Then a special session may be unavoidable."

Strike Threatens Federal Projects

Elevator and Hoist Men at Odds Over Lifting of Machinery.

Construction operations on two important Government projects here may possibly cease today as the result of a threatened strike arising out of differences between hoisting engineers and elevator men.

The dispute is said to have arisen from the use of hoists by the elevator men to lift machinery used in installing the elevators. The hoisting engineers, it was said, contend they are entitled to this work, while the elevator men say they are privileged in this matter by reason of recent mediation.

Treasury Department officials said that they had heard that the local hoisting engineers' union had threatened to withdraw its men from the Justice Department project and that similar action is contemplated with regard to the new Labor Departmtnt project.

Bluejacket Draws Three Years in Girl Affair

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 6—Convicted a few days ago of a statutory offense involving a 13-year-old girl, Eddie Bregnala, 24, Filipino sailor, today was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary by Judge Nicholas H. Green in Anne Arundel County Circuit Court.

Former Judge Robert Mosh defended Bregnala, whose trial was before a jury. Moss sought a new trial, but his motion was overruled. Judge Green admitted there were mitigating circumstances, but not sufficient to disturb the jury's conclusion.

Virginia to Float Loan of $500,000

Four Months' Delay of Car Tag Payments Given as Cause.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Bids for a loan of $500,000 to the State of Virginia on its note due four months hence were under review by the State Sinking Fund Board today. A preliminary examination indicated that the State will not have to pay more than 2 per cent interest on the loan, and possibly less.

Negotiation of the loan was caused by a shrinkage in the State's revenue, particularly in the extension of the 1932 automobile license period to April 1, depriving the State of a large sum heretofore coming into the treasury in January.

Fiscal officers estimated that the short-time loan would tide the State over until the motor vehicle licenses are due in April.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The will of George Cole Scott, Richmond financier, admitted to probate today, set forth that an estate of $700,000 is to be administered by his widow, Mrs. Hildreth Dunn Scott, his son, George Cole Scott, jr., and the First and Merchants Bank, all of whom were named as executors.

Under the terms of the will the widow was bequeathed all of the tangible personal property and the remainder is left in trust for her and the two children. Mrs. Scott will receive the income from one-half of the trust estate, his son one-fourth, and a daughter, Harriet Hildreth, the other one-fourth.

R. F. & P. Pays Virginia $70,192 in Dividends

Richmond, Va., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—State Treasurer John N. Purcell today announced that the State of Virginia received $70,192 from 2,752 shares of common stock and 14,796 shares of dividend obligation stock of the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad. The figure was compared with $140,384 received in 1931.

This represented the difference between an 8 per cent and a 4 per cent dividend on the State's holdings of stock in the railroad.

Tame Deer's Reign of Terror Ends.

Roswell, N. Mex., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—A tame deer that terrorized the Berrendo community yesterday afternoon was back in his pasture today peacefully munching hay. The animal, raised by Ed Roberts, escaped yesterday afternoon, walked through open doors into farmhouses, chased several men, women and children and stopped a couple of automobiles. The sheriff aided in recapturing him.

Fish Lives Under Mud.

Asuncion, Paraguay, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—A fish from Chaco streams which can dig itself into the mud and live for days is on its way to the British Museum. It has two bladders in which it secretes water for its hibernations. When rivers dry up between rains the fish burrows into the muck.

REPEAL OPPOSITION BEFOGS WET HOPES

Both Factions Expected to Be Split by Wording of Resolution.

(Associated Press.)

The possibility of Democratic opposition to the Senate repeal resolution, in the form in which it now is framed, last night clouded the hopes of its sponsors for early approval.

There were strong indications that wet and dry ranks both would be split by the phraseology of the measure, but plans for its speedy consideration were under way.

A Senate judiciary subcommittee prepared to listen today to six hours of arguments over the constitutionality of the 3.2 per cent beer bill passed by the House before Christmas.

Three hours of the hearing have been allotted to each side, and the friends of prohibition were mustering their strongest legal evidence to prove that beer of that alcoholic content would be a violation of the eighteenth amendment.

Present Dry Testimony.

The dry testimony will be presented by Edward B. Dunford, Andrew Wilson and Robert H. McNeil, of Washington, representing the national conference of organizations supporting the eighteenth amendment, which embraces several church and temperance organizations including the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Antisaloon League; Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the woman's national committee for law enforcement, and Mrs. William T. Bannerman, of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Sponsors of the beer bill are expected to present an equally formidable array of legal talent headed by Representative James M. Beck, Pennsylvania Republican. Their other witnesses had not been announced.

Whether the Democrats would make a party issue of the repeal resolution had not been determined yesterday. It was discussed Thursday night at the conference between President-Elect Roosevelt and congressional leaders, but no final agreement was reached.

Blaine Would Save Repeal.

One prominent opponent of prohibition said definitely that he would vote against the repeal resolution in its present form. Other critics of the dry laws, however, including Senators Blaine (Republican), Wisconsin, and Bingham (Republican), Connecticut, have said they will vote for the measure rather than kill repeal.

A similiar difference of opinion was evident among the friends of prohibition. Senator Fess, Ohio Republican, indicated that he would vote for the resolution, saying it "Does not differ in the main from the Republican position which I will support."

Senator Robinson (Republican), Indiana, has announced he will oppose the repeal proposal in any form, while Senators Sheppard (Democrat), Texas, and Borah (Republican), Idaho, have withheld final judgment.

RAINEY STRONG FOE OF FURTHER PAY CUT

report it to the full appropriations committee Monday morning. A report to the Senate had been planned for today, but death of Mr. Coolidge caused an adjournment over the week-end.

Chairman Bingham of the Senate economy committee, yesterday revised his estimates of economies involved in his report after conferring with Federal accounting officials. Whereas preliminary estimates placed the savings at $30,000,000, Mr. Bingham said yesterday the gross figure would aggregate $41,500,000. From this, however, would have to be deducted $4,000,000 that would be paid out for automatic salary increases and promotions, and other items leaving $37,000,000 net. Estimates of savings from the 1 2-3 per cent pay cut were dropped from $18,000,000 to $16,000,000.

Bingham answered criticism of the committee's action in exempting Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers from travel pay provisions under the economy act. Far from being a gift to the military, Bingham said, this step alone would result in a saving of $500,000. It seems that under the old travel pay basis officers paid for their food. Under the economy act this expense is borne by the Government.

Other revised economy estimates indicated that $10,000,000 would be saved from extending the nonfilling of vacancy provision, $8,700,000 from reductions in veterans' compensation, $750,000 in travel expenses from extending military service in foreign posts and $150,000 from abolishing the Bureau of Efficiency.

There would be another offset of $350,000 for the cost of liberalizing the differential for night work.

Labor Will Vigorously Fight Slash Proposal

Organized labor will wage a vigorous offensive against the 1 2-3 per cent Federal pay cut recommended by the Senate economy committee.

This became known after a three-hour executive session yesterday afternoon of American Federation of Labor heads and more than 100 representatives of affiliated local and national Government worker organizations.

William Green, A. F. L. president, declared in a formal statement after the conference that "the American Federation of Labor would exert every honorable and legitimate effort possible to defeat the additional reduction in wages recommended by the economy committee. An appeal will be made to the members of the appropriation committee and of the United States Senate to reject this recommendation."

Garners Honor Guests At Texas Club Meeting

Speaker and Mrs. John N. Garner were guests of honor at the annual Texas Club reception at the Washington Hotel last night.

Among those present were Senators Connally and Sheppard, of Texas, and their families, and other congressional representatives of the Lone Star State. Representative Thomason, of El Paso, president of the club, presented Mr. and Mrs. Garner.

Careful Branding Sought.

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Careless branding of cattle on the ranches has damaged their hides to the extent of $40,000,000 during the last 10 years and tanners and cattlemen hope to substitute ear-marking or some other method of identification.

Governor-Elect Seeks Relief Data

(Associated Press.)

Eugene Talmadge, who next Tuesday will take over the reins of the governorship of Georgia, yesterday conferred with officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on the relief situation in his State.

The incoming governor did not ask for a loan for the State at this time, but merely sought information. He talked at length with Fred C. Croxton, assistant to the directors in charge of relief. From Mr. Croxton he obtained full information as to how he must present applications for relief funds after he becomes governor.

He was accompanied to Washington by Hermann de Laperriere, who will be State director of relief after Talmadge becomes governor.

GREEN ASSERTS IDLE TOTAL STILL RISING

(Associated Press.)

An "all-time peak" of unemployment was reported last night by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who estimated that 11,590,000 were out of work in November.

Noting that this figure was greater by 130,000 than the previous high mark reported for August, he added that word from affiliated trade unions indicated the total for early December was even greater than that for the previous month.

"Those out of work are in greater need now than ever before, for after three years of depression their resources are exhausted," Mr. Green said. "Mental and physical wreckage caused by depression is driving families to seek relief in constantly growing numbers. Relief need is increasing much faster than unemployment. In the year ended October, 1932, unemployment increased 60 per cent, but the number of families aided increased 94.5 per cent and the amount of relief given 88.6 per cent.

"One encouraging fact, however, is shown by the November unemployment estimate and by our trade union reports for November and December; unemployment is increasing less rapidly this fall than in any other depression year. Even in the fall of 1929, the increase in unemployment was greater than it has been this year. In the three years before 1932, industrial and farm layoffs threw nearly 1,000,000 persons out of work from October to November. This year only about 700,000 lost their jobs. Thus 300,000 men and women who might have been laid off have been kept at work."

Legion Posts Cited For Roster Work

Virginia State Commander Names Madison and Danville Units.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—M E. Bristow, commander of the Virginia Department, American Legion, has been advised that two Virginia legion posts have been cited by national headquarters for outstanding membership work for the year 1933.

They are Danville Post, No. 10, and Madison Post, No. 157. J. Ed. Wagner, is commander of the Danville post, and George W. Floyd is adjutant. H. C. Marshall is commander of the Madison post, and S. H. Smith is adjutant.

The announcement was made today by W. Glenn Elliot, State adjutant. The citations were for equaling or surpassing the membership record of the post for 1932. It came as a result of their drives for 1933 memberships.

"Lay Off" Robbery, Is Plea of Actress

Hollywood Police, Though, to Pursue Case of Betty Compson.

Hollywood, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Unidentified influences prompted Betty Compson, movie actress, to ask police today to "lay off" her jewel robbery case. The actress said she had been promised that her $37,500 worth of jewels, which she had reported taken last night by a holdup man, will be returned to her if she does "the right thing."

Meeting insurance adjusters at her home, Miss Compson signed a waiver of any claims under several policies against robbery.

Detectives said, however that investigation will be "pushed to the limit" on the theory the robbery may have been instigated by a gang believed responsible for several other holdups of movie persons in which the victims ars reported to have regained their property through underworld channels by paying 20 cents on the dollar of value.

Doctor's Illness Halts Case of Girl Patricide

Newport News, Va., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Illness of a physician who may give important testimony in the defense of Frances Lassiter, 16, confessed slayer of her father, caused postponement of the juvenile court hearings of a murder charge against the high school girl here today. Judge Massey of the juvenile court announced he would continue the hearing until next Wednesday at 10 a. m.

In testifying yesterday the girl said she shot her father, Alexander M. Lassiter, because he was berating her mother for making Christmas purchases unknown to him. The shooting occurred on the night of December 22.

Oklahoma City, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—T. H. Vaughn, 56, president of the Petroleum Building Corporation and the American Standard Insurance Co., died unexpectedly of a heart attack at his home today. Funeral services will be held in Maryville, Okla., Sunday.

G. O. P. CAMPAIGN EXPENSES LOWER

Spent $2,670,652 Up to Year's Close; Ford Paid $25,000 Radio Bill.

(Associated Press.)

The grind of hard times bore down heavily on political parties last year and forced them to conduct their campaigns on about half what the Hoover-Smith battle cost in 1928. The total spent was just above $5,000,000.

Reflecting the times, the Republican national committee's report to Congress yesterday showed it had spent $2,670,652 between June 1, 1932 and the end of the year. Expenditures before June 1 were not heavy.

The Democratic national committee already had filed a statement with South Trimble, clerk of the House of Representatives, showing its expenses to be around two and a quarter million dollars.

In 1928, Republicans spent $6,256,000 and Democrats $5,342,000.

Despite the restricted expenditures this time, both parties ended the presidential election year with deficits. That for the Democrats appeared to be $769,000; the Republicans said their deficit, besides some unpaid bills, was $195,000.

Radio Bill Heavy.

The Republican report showed that of the $2,670,000 spent, $95,342 went to the G. O. P. congressional committee; $179,000 to State committees, and $1,822,000 to the national committee.

Among the unpaid bills were $114,971 for radio; $86,000 on notes, and $10,000 borrowed for the congressional committee. The noteholders were not enumerated.

Besides that, Henry Ford was said to have paid another radio bill of $25,000, while Secretary Stimson gave radio companies $3,306 for time he and President Hoover used on the air.

Ford's radio bill, if he did not expect repayment, constituted the biggest contribution to the G. O. P. in the seven months. His son, Edsel, also made an outright donation of $5,000.

Rockefeller Gave $15,000.

Harvey Firestone, sr., of Akron, Ford's good friend, gave $20,396 to help elect Republicans. Henry M. Robinson, of Los Angeles, adviser to the President, contributed $2,000, and the elder John D. Rockefeller was listed as the donor of $15,000 at one time.

Other Republican contributors were: Secretary Stimson, $5,335; Miss Mary Gardiner Thompson, New York, $5,000; Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Wiggin, New York, $5,000; Col. H. H. Rogers, Southampton, Long Island, $1,000; Secretary Wills, $1,726; H. W. Hoover, North Canton, Ohio, $2,000; J. R. Nutt, of Cleveland, treasurer of the national committee, $5,000; Henry P. Fletcher, New Castle, Pa., formerly ambassador and member of the Tariff Commission, $1,000; Lewis E. Pierson, New York, $3,000; Mrs. Jeremiah Milbank, New York, $1,000; Senator Metcalf, of Rhode Island, $1,000; Harold S. Vanderbilt, New York, $1,000; Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Reid, New York, $5,000, and William Nelson Cromwell, New York, $1,000.

Latin Participation Is Sought for Show

Flower Exhibit President to Tour by Plane With Invitation.

(Associated Press.)

Seeking participation by Latin-American countries in the international tropical flower show to be held at Miami Beach, Fla., March 29 to April 2, Mrs. Julien Sutherland, president, will leave Miami tomorrow by plane on a tour of the South and Central American capitals. She will return to Miami March 7.

The flower display, Mrs. Sutherland said, has the support of American diplocats here, the Pan-American Union and Pan-American Society of New York.

Secretary Hyde of Agriculture has promised to follow precedent in sending a display of amaryllis, native of Brazil. Orchids are to be sent from various Latin-American countries by airplane.

RENEWAL OF BATTLE IMPENDING IN CHINA

the young Marshal Chang in Peiping, declaring any further encroachments into China proper should be "vigorously opposed."

The Japanese military commander at Chinwangtao protested to the Chinese military authorities that Chinese marauders have been plundering Japanese homes.

The Chinese privately let it be known they feared these accusations were being made to provide an excuse for another Japanese offensive within the Great Wall.

At Nanking, the Chinese government's foreign office issued a lengthy statement seeking to show that Japanese started both the bombing and infantry attacks which resulted in their capture of Shanhaikwan earlier in the week.

Shanghai Hero Impatient.

Shanghai, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The poet-Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai, who became the national hero of China a year ago when his nineteenth route army put up a dogged defense against the Japanese in the long battle of Shanghai, appealed today for a chance to lead his men against his old enemy in the Shanhaikwan area.

From Hongkong the poet-general telegraphed to the national government: "If Chang Hsiao-Liang has no intention of resisting, I will take the nineteenth route army into North China."

The nineteenth, which bore the brunt of the defense of Shanghai a year ago, now is encamped in Fukien Province after a campaign against Chinese Communists.

Geneva, Jan. 6 (U.P.).—The Chinese delegation today were understood to have received new instructions from Nanking, asking that the League of Nations demand the Japanese withdraw at once from Shanhaikwan, and pay reparations for damage there.

Admiral for Enlistment of Idle.

Great Lakes, Ill., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Enlistment of unemployed men in the Navy for four-month periods was suggested today by Admiral Wat T. Admiral Cluverius said the training station which he commands is "prepared to welcome 1,500 unemployed young men" for a four-month period of enlistment and training.

COOPERATION ASKED IN INAUGURAL PLANS

Grayson Wants Democratic Leaders in Each State to Assist.

Cooperation of the leading Democrats in every State in the Union in the inaugural ceremonies for Franklin D. Roosevelt and John N. Garner has been requested by Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the Roosevelt inaugural committee.

Admiral Grayson has asked the Democratic national committeemen in each State and Territory to name an inaugural committee for their localities to cooperate with the general committee in any plans they may be making to take part in the ceremonies on March 4.

In this way he hopes not only to stimulate interest in the inauguration, but coordinate the plans of the entire country for the single purpose of the celebration here.

National Committeemen.

The national committeemen have been requested to appoint committees of ten or more prominent Democrats whose function it will be to participate in all of the preliminary inaugural arrangements that may be made in their States.

Admiral Grayson will leave Washington this morning for Hyde Park, where he will pass the week-end with President-elect Roosevelt. At that time he expects to acquaint Gov. Roosevelt with the accomplishments of the inaugural committee since the December conference at Warm Springs and receive additional instructions which the President-elect may have relative to the program.

Subcommittee Chairmen.

Admiral Grayson yesterday named the eighteen subcommittee chairmen who will handle the detail of the March 4 program. They are as follows:

Finance committee, Lloyd B. Wilson; legislative committee, Leslie C. Garnett; housing and hospitality committee, Mrs. Blair Bannister; committee on reception of governors and distinguished guests, Raymond T. Baker; historic sites committee, George Rothwell Brown; entertainment committee, Huston Thompson; grandstands and decorations committee, Waddy Wood; grandstand ticket committee, Daniel C. Roper; medals, badges and souvenirs committee, Robert Woolley; public order committee, Melvin C. Hazen; medical aid and emergency arrangements committee, Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland; transportation committee, Thomas P. Littlepage; printing and engraving committee, John P. Colpoys; press relations and communications committee, Charles Michelson; inaugural ball committee, Mrs. John Allen Dougherty and Wilton J. Lambert, honorary chairman; official program committee, J. Fred Essary; budget and auditing committee, James A. Councilor; special entertainment committee, Dr. G. David Houston.

Each of these chairmen will have a free hand in naming the men and women who will serve with them on the individual units.

Valise Checked at Roanoke Express Office; Missing for Week.

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Police here have been notified of the disappearance of Myron J. Lockwood, senior student and lieutenant in the Cadet Corps at Virginia Military Institute, missing since last Saturday.

Lockwood, whose parents are dead, has not been heard from since he left the home of his uncle, Wilbur J. Dixon, with whom he lives at New Canaan, Conn. His monogrammed valise, packed as it was when he left to return to school, was checked at an express office here and later returned to New Canaan.

Mr. Dixon, who came here today, said he feared foul play.

Bruce Cabinet Report Leaves Tydings in Dark

(Associated Press)

If Howard Bruce, Baltimore financier, is to be Secretary of the Treasury in the Roosevelt cabinet, as reported from New York, Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, knows nothing about it.

"I've heard Mr. Bruce's name mentioned for appointment to a number of posts, but I know nothing definite about it," Senator Tydings said. "I haven't talked to Mr. Roosevelt on appointments and I don't know what is in his mind. I have no idea what Maryland people may be selected for posts in the new administration."

FARM PRICE-FIXING SPLITS PARTY RANKS

G. O. P. Progressives Favor It, but City Democrats May Desert.

(Associated Press.)

Democratic House leaders, doubtful of the large Eastern city vote of their own party for the emergency farm relief bill, last night were assured the virtual unanimous support of Northwestern Republican progressives.

After a day of speech-making, during which the name of President-elect Roosevelt was bound more closely to the domestic allotment plan for fixing minimum prices, a score of progressives found themselves virtually agreed in favor of the measure.

"We are nearly united in our plans," announced representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York chairman of the group. "With a few perfecting amendments, most of our men will support the bill."

Texan Confident.

LaGuardia is one of the few from big metropolitan districts, who openly has advocated the bill. There was a large question mark over the ballots of the large Tammany delegation, and most of the North Atlantic Seaboard members of both parties were expected to vote "no" on the final roll call, in protest against what they consider an aggravated sales tax.

But Jones, of Texas, author of the bill, continued confident of its ultimate success, though declining to predict what amendments may be made. Remarking off the floor on the upturn in Chicago wheat prices, in anticipation of expected price-fixing, the Texan said:

"And they say this bill wouldn't help the farmer."

Nelson, of Missouri, was the first Democrat to link Roosevelt with the relief plan. He told the House he would "like to go along with the next President of the United States."

Sold to Roosevelt.

"I'm told that this is the plan that has been sold to Mr. Roosevelt," Nelson said. "If it has been, I am going to do the best I can to see that he must never pay for it, that my party must never pay for it, for this plan like all other artificial plans must fail."

Representative Beck (Republican), Pennsylvania, suggested that "some influential Wall street financiers sold this plan to Gov. Roosevelt," and later in the day, Representative Kopp (Republican), Iowa, remarked:

"It is generally understood that Roosevelt favors this plan and if it is not passed this session, it will be in the next. That being the case, is it not a good idea to pass it now and give it a fair and early trial."

PUBLISHER-LEADER HELD AS FUGITIVE

Colorado Denies Chain-Gang Story as Related by Clevelander.

Cleveland, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—A prosperous and respected Cleveland business man today was taken into custody as an escaped convict from Colorado and, within a few hours, laid plans to resist return to the prison from which he escaped fourteen years ago.

The man was known here for the last nine years as Harry Stanley, manager of a music publishing company, married and well-to-do.

Sixteen years ago he was known in Denver, Colo., as Glenn Smeeman, a youth who was sentenced to three years for an automobile theft, because he said, he protected the name of a woman, who was to blame.

Warden Roy Best of the Colorado Prison tonight at Canon City said he did not want Smeeman back, but would follow the letter of the Colorado law and ask for extradition. He disputed Smeeman's statement to police here that he escaped from a prison chain gang. Smeeman, the warden said, was serving at a prison farm.

Two courses are open for Smeeman, his attorney, Frederick Frankel, said. One is to attempt to convince Gov. George White of Ohio that extradition should not be honored because of his excellent record here. The other is to plead with the Governor of Colorado for an immediate pardon. Frankel said it would be decided tomorrow which plan to follow.

Police would not discuss the arrest of Smeeman, but the fugitive blamed an unnamed woman who, he said, attempted to blackmail him.

New Orleans Formally Renews Prelenten Fetes

New Orleans, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Renewing a century-old observance on pre-Lenten merrymaking, New Orleans formally opened the carnival season tonight, when society danced to the music of anonymous hosts at the glittering ball of the Twelfth Night Revelers.

Only an exclusive invitation list was bidden to the futuristic fairyland into which the Municipal Auditorium was converted, but it gave the signal for more than a month of magnificent functions to be climaxed in the week preceding Mardi Gras, on February 28 this year, when elaborate street pageants and general hilarity will bid a figurative adieu to the flesh before the 40 days of Lent.

Coaches to be Heavier.

Rome, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—A number of new railroad coaches for the state railroads which are heavier, longer and wider have been ordered. They will more closely approximate American coaches. They will be 79 feet long and weigh 43 tons each.

De Valera's Followers Worried About Health

Dublin, Irish Free State, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The health of President De Valera is causing his followers grave concern. It was noticed that when he spoke at a great rally here last night he wore two overcoats and read his speech, a most unusual practice for the dynamic president.

It was said that the strain under which he has been working for the last few months undoubtedly had weakened his resistance and the trying period that lies just ahead is causing his friends to bring pressure upon him to take care of himself.

"PRINCE" MAY RULE AT ARTS BALL AGAIN

Gerguson Ordered Released Under Bail Pending Further Quiz.

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—"Prince Michael Romanoff" was ordered excluded from the country today, but the Beaux Arts Ball may see his pseudo-regal presence after all.

The little pants presser whose real name is Harry F. Gerguson was ordered released from Ellis Island today under $2,500 bond pending further investigation of his analogous claim to American citizenship.

How he plans to reconcile his claims to citizenship and to the birth right of a Romanoff puzzled his acquaintances, but he has swept greater obstacles than that from his primrose path of posturings through the capitals of the world.

Gerguson's release in bail was ordered today by Murray Garsson, special inspector of the Department of Labor assigned to his case. It followed a hearing before a board of inquiry which ordered him excluded from this country.

Alan S. Hays, Gerguson's attorney, said he would be able to offer additional evidence to support the citizenship claim. In order that his client might be admitted to bail he waived the right of having the hearing adjourned until the new evidence can be procured in favor of taking an appeal to the Labor Department in Washington.

Hays said he expected to complete arrangements for Gerguson's bail bond by noon tomorrow.

The date of the Beaux Arts Ball is January 20, so if the appeal proceedings can be prolonged the "prince" can hold court as usual at the annual society function. When he was deported last spring he announced he would be back for the affair.

It is a costume ball with a different period of setting specified for each year's event. The locale this year is to be that of a world cruise and there have been suggestions the "prince" might go as a stowaway.

MARINE FLIER JOINS CATERPILLAR RANKS

Lieut. Britt Leaves Plane at 200 Feet and Lands Safely at Miami.

Miami, Fla., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Lieut. Glenn M. Britt, of the Marine Flying Detachment from Quantico, Va., leaped from his disabled plane 200 feet above the All-American Air Races Field here today and descended unhurt in his parachute.

Britt was flying in maneuvers with five other Marine aviators under command of Lieut. Sandy Sanderson, when his plane developed trouble.

While about 5,000 spectators stared in stunned silence, he stepped out of the crazily falling plane and his parachute opened safely. The plane fell some distance from the stands, wrecking when it hit the ground. Lieut. Britt's home is in Roseburg, Oreg.

Others Continue Stunt.

The five other planes in the formation continued their stunting and then landed in close grouping as the crowd cheered widly.

Lieut. Britt was brought to the officials' stand, and through the loud speaker system said: "Hello, folks! I'm unhurt."

It was the first accident of the meet, which opened yesterday.

Alton B. Sherman, of Hyannis, Mass., flying at 133.968 miles an hour, today won the Curtiss Trophy, prize event of the race, emblematic of supremacy for planes of 500 to 800 cubic inches displacement.

Davis Sets Speed Mark.

A cash prize of $200 went with the trophy, raced for over a 15-mile three-cornered course. Art Carnahan, of Bloomington, Ill., at 124.783 miles an hour, was second and Neill McCray third.

The highest speed of the present meet, in competition, was touched today by Doug Davis, of Atlanta, when he won a free-for-all 25-mile race at 155 miles an hour. Art Davis, of Orlando, was second with 144 miles an hour and Alton B. Sherman, of Hyannis, Mass., third, 141 miles an hour.

Army fliers from Langley Field, Va., put on a demonstration of planes in maneuvers under remote control. The directing officer was in the new 200-mile-an-hour bomber.

Betty Lund, flaxen-haired aviatrix, gave a brief exhibition during the afternoon. Tomorrow's program called for stunt flying by Mrs. Lund, widow of Freddie Lund, stunt flier, killed in 1931.

Bomb Contest Held.

Elkin Floyd, of Brooksville, Fla., won today's bomb-dropping contest, missing the mark by only 30 feet. Dr. C. R. Owen, of Asheville, N. C., was second, 60 feet, and Harold Neumann, of Moline, Ill., third, 77 feet.

Clipping off 130 miles an hour in a snub-nosed speedster, William Rausch, of White Plains, N. Y., won the 15-mile race for open cockpit planes. Art Davis, of Orlando, was second and Joe Musleh, of Jacksonville, third.

W. H. C. Seward, of Arcadia, Fla., again won the dead-stick landing contest, just as he did on the first day of the meet. This time he stopped 5 feet from the mark. Art Davis was second and L. Heard, of Miami, third.

Boy Rescues Cross From Bayou Floor

Florida Youth Is to Have Lucky Year if Greek Tradition Holds.

Tarpon Springs, Fla., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Holding aloft a golden cross he had retrieved from the bottom of the bayou, a frail, curly-haired young schoolboy today was the central figure in the celebration of the Pageant of the Epiphany by the Greek Orthodox Church.

Johnny Kardgulias, 16, knelt before the bishop presiding over the ceremony and received the blessing of his church and the plaudits of thousands who lined the natural amphitheater surrounding the bayou, because he was able to bring up the cross the bishop had a moment before tossed into the water.

Kardgulias, according to tradition, will be especially fortunate in the year to come. The Epiphany to the Greek Orthodox Church means the actual appearance of Christ to mankind and historical tradition of the Eastern Orthodox Church makes it a symbolism of the baptism of Jesus.

Gov. Russell to Leave Tuesday to Be Senator

Atlanta, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Gov. Richard B. Russell, jr., of Georgia, who ends his term of a year and a half Tuesday, when Eugene Talmadge is inaugurated, has made arrangements to leave late that day for Washington, to take his seat in the United States Senate.

The governor expects to take the oath in the Senate Thursday morning. He succeeds Senator John S. Cohen, appointed by him to serve until a successor could be chosen to the late Senator William J. Harris. Russell defeated former Representative Charles R. Crisp in the Democratic primary and was unopposed in the general election.

MAJOR'S CONVICTION UPHELD IN COLORADO

Shephard, Guilty of Slaying Wife, Will Appeal to Supreme Court.

Denver, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The conviction of Maj. Charles A. Shephard for the poison murder of his wife, allegedly so he could wed Grace Brandon, youthful blonde stenographer, was affirmed today by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

An appeal to the United States Supreme Court from the sentence of life imprisonment was announced here immediately by the 61-year-old Army medical officer.

The three circuit judges were divided, two to one. Judges Robert E. Lewis and John H. Cotteral joined in the affirmation. Judge Orie L. Phillips dissented.

Maj. Shephard will remain at liberty on his present bond of $20,000 until the court's mandate is issued, in 35 days. He then will have to file an appeal bond, if the case is taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Shephard's attorneys, in the appeal, charged Federal District Judge Richard J. Hopkins had made remarks from the bench detrimental to the defense during the trial in Kansas City, Kans., and had erred in the admission of evidence.

Maj. Shephard, who is serving as specialist on pulmonary diseases at Fitzsimmons General Hospital at Aurora, near Denver, has made sturdy and frequent denial of his guilt.

Mrs. Zenana Shephard was 37 years old when she died. Her death followed the return of Maj. Shephard to Fort Riley from San Antonio, Tex., where he admittedly was attentive to Miss Brandon, 23-year-old stenographer at Brooks Field.

peatedly questioned the fire department's tactics.

"This fire is of general-alarm proportions," he said. "I can't understand why they haven't more men."

He pointed to a ladder and explained it had been standing against a girder "for more than half an hour and no attempt has been made to hoist a hose."

Limestone facing on the side walls of a court inside the building was apparently the object of Mr. Stewart's greatest concern. The limestone was said to be very valuable, although no definite value was set.

Loss Not Estimated.

Officials of the construction company pointed out that an estimate of the damages could not be made until today. Steel construction work on the new building has been finished for some time. Wooden forms, laid in preparation for the concrete roof suffered the greatest loss.

It was in these forms, completed only last week, that the flames centered. High on top of the building, the blaze was fanned by a slight breeze and quickly spread. The entire north roof was soon a mass of fire.

In attempting to stretch hose, firemen were confronted by a deep ditch, lined with cement, which completely surrounded the building. The ditch, about five feet deep, was bridged with planks and in the darkness, firemen were forced to balance themselves on these boards to gain access to the building.

On one side of the Interstate Commerce Building is the new Postoffice Building, while adjoining the other end is the new Department of Labor Building. Neither of these buildings was damaged.

Sabotage Charged.

Although Mr. Stewart emphatically declared that he had been having no trouble with his labor forces, H. D. Watts, vice president of the company, indicated the fire was "a plain case of sabotage."

"It's as plain a case of sabotage as I ever saw," Mr. Watts declared, "and I have been in construction work for many years."

Mr. Stewart said the fire would set him back at least six months in his contract. It had been planned to complete the work by next December.

All losses are fully covered by insurance, according to R. B. Cunningham, of the Liverpool, London & Globe Insurance Co.

Charles E. Schrom, acting chief of the Fire Department in the absence of Chief George Watson, when told of expressions voiced by officials of the construction company, declared: "It was a very difficult fire to fight. Within twenty minutes after the alarm we had nine streams of water on the blaze from the Twelfth street side. We were hindered by the height of the building."

Lack of Water Plugs.

The firemen also were hindered by the lack of water plugs throughout the vicinity. Several have been moved to make way for construction work and still others were made inaccessable by fencing around the building.

Although only one alarm was sounded, two battalion chiefs responded. Asked if this was unusual, the Fire Board stated that it "was Fire Department business."

The only fire plugs available were three on Twelfth street, two on Constitution avenue and one on Fourteenth street, a block away. Six engine companies and three truck companies responded to the alarm.

Mr. Stewart declared that no foreign labor was imported. Every man on the job, he said, is from Washington and vicinity.

Relief Head Found Slain.

Stamford, Tex., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Ray Rector, 48, who, friends said, had been depressed over cases brought to him as charity relief director for the city, was found shot to death in the garage at his home today. Officers said he committed suicide. Rector was a past grand master of Texas Odd Fellows. His widow and six children survive.

FRANCE DROPS DEBT TALKS TILL MARCH 4

Herriot Letter Raps Spread of Propaganda in U. S. Scoring Homeland.

Paris, Jan. 6 (U.P.).—Definite indication that Franco-American war debts negotiations have been finally suspended until after March 4 was given for the first time tonight in an inspired statement to the press on the crisis.

The statement said, in part: "France has no interest in pursuing useless conversations with a representative whose authority is limited. Ambassador Claudel accordingly has informed Secretary of State Stimson of Premier Joseph Paul-Boncour's decision."

The inspired statement freely admitted bitter words were most likely to overflow on both sides of the Atlantic on the debts crisis before the inauguration of the new Roosevelt regime. It emphasized, however, that the advent of President-elect Roosevelt's administration would bring new men and new ideas into the picture, and concluded:

Borah Is Praised.

"Senator Borah's statement regarding France is most interesting, coming from the chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee. Senator Borah certainly can not be accused of being a Francophile."

This referred to Borah's speech in the Senate earlier in the week, blaming the present crisis on the Hoover debt moratorium.

The press generally lauded Borah's support of France's debts position, showing a strangely contrasting attitude to one who has been generally disliked in this country.

Herriot Raps Propaganda.

The statement came on the heels of an article by former Premier Edouard Herriot, vigorously attacking what he termed the spread of anti-French propaganda in the United States as a result of the debt crisis.

Herriot, who was overthrown when he insisted France meet her December 15 payment, in an article called "A Letter to Americans," declared the propaganda "especially on the subject of gold has proved most unjust and malicious."

The article was published in the Radical-Socialist official organ, and blamed the debt crisis on the lack of time for further negotiations, due to the November elections in the United States. Herriot, after attacking anti-French propaganda, said:

"Moreover, the French people and Parliament are unable to understand why they were refused what they proposed themselves to do for Germany."

Goes Into Detail.

He referred to the termination of German reparations payments.

Herriot's "Letter to Americans" further asserted the French Parliament did not contest France's duty to meet the December payment, but based their request for an extension of time on Great Britain's plea of December 11. He said:

"Unfortunately there was a misunderstanding here also, for we didn't clearly know what became of the British reservations. I personally insist even now that the annuity should have been paid to show the United States a united Europe not as an enemy but as an agency capable of coordinated peace work.

"However, I wish to explain to the people of the United States while it is true that debts and reparations technically are two subjects, the people of France remember one war only."

GIRL IS MURDERED IN MYSTERY ATTACK

Miss McCloskey's black suede slippers, and nearby her tan beret.

Detectives found a zig-zag trail, dotted with bloodstains, leading away from the gravel pit, and evidently made by Miss McCloskey. This, they said, showed that she had tried to escape her assailants, stumbling and falling several times, going through a mud puddle, where she lost her other shoe, going in and out among piles of gravel and earth, and collapsing under the catalpa tree.

Attempting to check on the crime as they have reconstructed it, Police Capt. Harry Heanley and Murder Squad Detective Joseph Summerdale went to the hospital and attempted to interview Boyle, but got no information. They said they were anxious to learn how Boyle, a tall, well-built man, got from the scene of the attack to where he was found, a distance of several blocks, while so badly injured.

The killing apparently occurred about midnight, police said, when this particular park section—a busy spot in the daytime—is deserted except for an occasional round by a mounted park guard.

Detectives said there had been several unsolved attacks on women in Fairmount Park recently, but were unable to link the crimes definitely, they declared. The most recent one occurred early last Wednesday on Mrs. Barbara Zussey, seamstress, in the rear of of the Rodin Museum, along the main parkway entrance to the park.

Another case which possibly may have a closer connection with Miss McCloskey's murder is that of Helen Loftus, 22, and her fiance, Morris Scott, who were drowned last August under mysterious circumstances while canoeing in the Schuylkill River which runs through Fairmount Park.

ROOSEVELT AND STIMSON PLAN DEBT TALK SUNDAY OR MONDAY

mittee, created a mild sensation by inferentially charging that the French had been encouraged to their default by assurances of revision from the President. The senator from Idaho based his charge on the text of the Hoover-Laval communique. The President has frequently through documentary evidence reiterated his categoric denial of this.

Paris official circles seized with avidity on the Borah statement. It was, however, recalled here that Senator Borah himself held a long conference with the French premier. Some few details of this conference were afterward let out by the senator himself, but the French premier preserved a conspicuous reserve on the subject matter of his Borah conversation and on his return to Paris gave several of his friends the impression that he had finally bearded the Lion of the Rockies.

It was learned yesterday on high authority that the Hoover-Laval interview itself afforded no opportunity for encouraging France to believe in revision or cancellation of debts. The main concern of the French premier in October, 1931, was to assure that there would be no other moratorium on either reparations or war debts. His conversations with the officials of the State, Treasury and administration all tended to this end. France had purposely delayed ratifying the Hoover moratorium when it was promulgated, in order to afford French bankers the margin of time to withdraw all their credits from Germany. The interval from the twentieth of June to the fifth or sixth of July saw the greatest exodus of French capital from Germany that had been known since the war.

France on the basis of the Young plan, was able to derive from Germany not only enough to pay all her debts to the United States and to Great Britain, but she was able to pile up a surplus. The action of the moratorium at once destroyed this financial resource for the French treasury, and Premier Laval's first concern was to ward off any possibility of another moratorium.

It also was pointed out that the text of the communique issued after the French statesman's visit to the White House specifically emphasized the absence of any understanding, either implied or contingent. The statement foresaw the necessity of making provision for the taking up of intergovernmental debt payments, but on the terms of these provisions "the two governments made all reservations."

The greatest possible inducements were made at that time and have been reiterated since, to turn the debt debt discussions away from the "capacity to pay" basis. On this basis, France realizes that her position regarding either cancellation or revision is untenable. President Hoover and Secretary Mills, as well as Secretary Mellon before him, have consistently declared that all debt negotiations will have to be conducted rigorously on this basis.

On the basis of economic ability to complete its war debt payments to the United States, France would find it necessary to disgorge the hoard of gold that has been stacking up in the vaults of the Bank of France. Just as France would be the country that would profit most by any cancellation program, so also she will undoubtedly be the country that will receive the least consideration in the revision of the war debts, when the new administration embarks on this step.

COOLIDGE WAS FIRM AGAINST PUBLIC LIFE

Did Not Belong to New Era, He Told Journalist Few Weeks Ago.

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—A determination "never again to hold public office" because "we are in a new era to which I do not belong" was expressed by Calvin Coolidge less than a month before he died to Henry L. Stoddard, journalist.

In telling of a conversation he had with the former President at a New York hotel on December 14, Stoddard, writing in the Sun, quotes Mr. Coolidge as saying:

"When I read of the new-fangled things that are now so popular, I realize that my time in public affairs is past."

Stoddard also tells how Mr. Coolidge asked him to set at rest "talk of nominating me for President in 1936."

Stressed Economy.

Commenting on the election, the former President said:

"The Democrats probably will set aside the Hoover measures and try some of their own. That only means experimenting with legislation. The big thing this country stands most in need of just now is economy. Unless Congress can bring down expenditures drastically, all other measures will not count for much. Probably the people will have to find a way out themselves."

Commenting on President Hoover, he said:

"A President on his way out is never given much consideration That's politics. * * * I made up my mind not to embarrass President Hoover by comments on his policies one way or the other, and I have never made any."

Said Common Sense Needed.

Of his own future, he said:

"Great changes can come in four years. These socialistic notions of government are not of my day. When I was in office, tax reduction, debt reduction, tariff stability and economy were the things to which I gave attention. We succeeded on those lines.

"It has always seemed to me that common sense is the real solvent for the Nation's problems at all times—common sense and hard work.

"When I read of the new-fangled things that are now so popular, I realize that my time in public affairs is past. I wouldn't know how to handle them if I were called upon to do so.

Through With Public Life.

"That is why I am through with public life forever. I shall never again hold public office. I shall always do my part to help elect Republican candidates, for I am a party man, but in no other way shall I have anything to do with political matters.

"I hear talk of nominating me for President in 1936. That can not be. There is no way I can decline something not yet offered, but I am embarrassed by the discussion of my name. I can not answer letters or give interviews, but I want to stop it before it gets too far. I authorize you to say publicly, in your own way and in your own time, that I am no longer to be considered for any public office. * * *

I do not think anything should be said until after the holidays; people will not be paying much attention to politics the next few weeks.

Firm Against New Office.

"We are in a new era to which I do not belong, and it would not be possible for me to adjust myself to it.

"These new ideas call for new men to develop them. That task is not for men who believe in the only kind of government I know anything about."

When asked by Stoddard if it would not be impossible for him to resist a demand for his election as President in 1936, Mr. Coolidge said:

"It was not in 1928, and it will not be again. I am through with public life. You can not state it too positively. Nothing would induce me to take office again."

Rubber Scientist Wins Highest Chemist Medal

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The Perkin Medal, one of the highest honors an American chemist can receive, was presented tonight by the Society of Chemical Industry to George Oenslager, of the B. F. Goodrich Co. laboratories in Akron, Ohio.

The committee which selected the recipient included members of the American Chemical Society, the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the Electrochemical Society, the Societe de Chemie Industrielle, and the Society of Chemical Industry. The medal was presented for Oenslager's contributions to the rubber industry, particularly in the development of organic vulcanization accelerators and the carbon black type of tire tread.

SHOEMAKER IS SAD AT LOSS OF FRIEND

White House had been addressed to James Lucey.

"I went up there," he said, "and Mrs. Coolidge took me by the hand. She didn't have much to say. She just gripped my hand and said 'Would you like to see him?'

"I stood over him and thought about things—about different things. I remembered when I shook hands with him at the depot when he went away to be Vice President. They took a picture of me then. It's up there on the wall."

The picture was inscribed: "Mr. James Lucey, shoemaker friend of Calvin Coolidge, bidding him goodby at Northampton depot, Mr. Coolidge was leaving for Washington to take up his duties as Vice President." It was in a simple frame, hung on the dusty wall.

"I remembered then that some young ladies, they were handsome girls, stepped up to me and asked me why I had been called a philosopher. I looked at them and I said, 'What is a philosopher?' They stumped right down. They didn't know. It was just a word to them. Well, I told them. I said philosophy was a rule of how to live. I said it was a guide to life.

"No, I wasn't an adviser of Calvin Coolidge. He said more for me than I did for him. But I liked it when he said I was his 'guide, philosopher and friend.' And I liked it when he said if it wasn't for me he would never have become what he was. It wasn't true. If I had never lived he would have been great."

Plymouth Sexton and Two Aids Dig Sandy Soil Grave

Thirtieth President Will Rest Beside Son, Calvin, Jr., Who Died in 1924; Flag on Schoolhouse in Vermont Flies at Half-staff.

Plymouth, Vt., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Men worked through the gathering dusk today digging a grave on a terraced hillside which will be the last resting place of Calvin Coolidge.

Aaro Johnson, sexton of the Plymouth Cemetery, and two assistants dug into the sandy soil in the shadow of Salt Ash Mountain, in the midst of the graves of six generations of Coolidges who were described in verse by the former President as "pillowed in the loving breast of our everlasting hills." Burial will be tomorrow.

The thirtieth President of the United States, who died suddenly yesterday in Northampton, Mass., will lie between his son, Calvin, jr., whose death in 1924 deeply grieved him, and his mother, Victoria J. Coolidge, whom he always had revered.

In the little village where Mr. Coolidge was reared life took on a new tempo. The flag on the schoolhouse, where 12 children learn their A B C's, was at halfstaff. It is the only flag in the village. The men folk gathered in the general store, operated by Miss Florence V. Cilley, and talked of the days when the man who brought fame to their tiny community moved in their midst.

The door opened to the back room, where the former President was born, and now a storeroom. Directly above, telephone and telegraph men hurried about installing the lines that will carry the news of the funeral tomorrow to the ends of the earth. It was the same room used by Mr. Coolidge as his office while on vacation here during his Presidency.

Just across the road, a lonely little silver-haired woman, Miss Aurora Pierce, sat dejectedly in the famous room where Calvin Coolidge took the oath of office on the death of President Warren Harding. A sewing box rested on the very table on which in the cold, predawn hours of that day Vice President Coolidge rested his hand on the family Bible and became the Chief Executive of the land.

She didn't know what she was going to do "about tomorrow."

"I haven't received any instructions from Northampton yet and until I do I don't know what I shall do about the funeral."

She said that after the excitement of the summer when Mr. Coolidge was staying at the house, she was glad to have a chance to rest, but that the sudden shock of hearing of Mr. Coolidge's death had left her suddenly lonesome. She has been in the household for nearly 25 years, she said.

No concerted action was planned by the populace as to attending the funeral, but it was the consensus that nearly all the village folk would be there. Probably there won't be many. Only eight dwellings, the schoolhouse, the church and a cheese factory make up the cluster known as Plymouth.

Johnson said he was ordered to prepare the grave by Paul Chase, law partner of John G. Sargent, former U. S. Attorney General, who was appointed by Mr. Coolidge and who was his lifelong friend. Mr. Sargent was ill at home and it was doubtful if he would be able to attend the burial.

The body will lie in the grave from which the body of Edith Ayers was taken some years ago. The family lot is marked by unpretentious stones and the turf is rough and untrimmed. Neighbors said Mr. Coolidge had refused to improve the lot, saying, "I don't want my lot to look any better than my neighbors'."

Friends also related that Frank Stearns, of Boston, a close friend of the former President, on the death of Calvin, jr., had offered to build a granite or marble mausoleum as a resting place for the body, but Mr. Coolidge refused the offer, saying that both Calvin, jr., and himself would lie with their ancestors.

State highway department workers sanded the roads and filled in ruts along the way the former President will come home, while Boy Scouts and police made preparations to facilitate passage of the procession.

SIMPLE FUNERAL IS PLANNED FOR CALVIN COOLIDGE TODAY

small army of reporters who for the last 36 hours have sent graphic details to all corners of the world of the life and death of Calvin Coolidge, tonight saw his body.

They were admitted to the spacious living room in the Beeches, the Coolidge home, and saw the former President in a setting of simplicity typical of the master of the house.

The body lay in a plain bronze casket, bearing the brief but historic legend: "1872—1933."

Over the casket hung an oil painting of the presidential yacht Mayflower, which was destroyed by fire at Philadelphia. Farther along the wall and around the room hung paintings of Mrs. Coolidge, Calvin, jr., Mrs. Victoria Coolidge, mother of the former President, Mr. Coolidge himself, and that familiar scene enacted in the farmhouse at Plymouth, Vt., when Mr. Coolidge, by lamp light, took the oath of office as President of the United States.

No floral display was in evidence, and the only activity as the six reporters stood in silent tribute was that of Tim, the chow dog, who trotted nervously about the room, seemingly knowing his master had departed.

Body to Lie in State.

At 8 o'clock Mr. Coolidge's body will be taken from his home, The Beeches, where yesterday Mrs. Coolidge found him lying dead on the floor of his dressing room. The casket will be borne by six policemen, members of the Northampton force, who will represent the affection his home city felt for the former President.

Upon reaching the church the body will lay in state for an hour that the rich and the poor, the important and the unimportant of the city and the Nation may pay their final respects to the former Chief Executive of the Nation.

The butcher, the barber, the baker, the friend and the neighbor will walk slowly with the representative, the senator, the Cabinet member and the governor past the bier.

An invocation and a benediction and the selections by the organist and church quartet will make up the services. Then the casket will be placed in a hearse and the funeral cortege will travel over the 100 miles of highway to Plymouth.

Honorary Pallbearers.

Mrs. Coolidge with her only surviving son, John, and his wife will occupy the family pew, No. 10, during the services. Seven of the men who were graduated from Amherst College with Mr. Coolidge in 1895 will sit in the section reserved for the faculty, alumni and undergraduates of the college. There will be no room for hundreds of the men and women who called Calvin Coolidge their friend.

The honorary pallbearers were selected from the long list of men who were friends and associates of Mr. Coolidge during his lifetime. They will be Frank Stearns, a Boston merchant, who was the first to prophesy the Presidency for Mr. Coolidge; William M. Butler, who managd his campaign for the Presidency as chairman of the Republican national committee, and also R. B. Hills, a neighbor of days before Washington knew Mr. Coolidge as President.

Others will be William Whiting, Holyoke paper manufacturer, who was named Secretary of Commerce by Mr. Coolidge; Clifford Lyman, Northampton merchant and deacon of the Jonathan Edwards Congregational Church; Judge Thomas J. Hammond, of the Superior Court, son of John C. Hammond, under whom Mr. Coolidge studied law as a young man; Walter L. Stevens, a Northampton lawyer; R. W. Hemenway, law partner of the former President; Homer C. Bliss, Mayor of Northampton; John H. Trumbull, former Governor of Connecticut and father of Mrs. John Coolidge, and Charles E. Andrews, present treasurer of Amherst College and a classmate of Mr. Coolidge in Amherst.

Wife "Bearing Up Well."

Mrs. Coolidge, who was shocked in finding the body of her husband, was "bearing up very well" under the strain. In her grief she turned to her son and daughter-in-law and Mrs. R. B. Hills, who had been with her since the death of Mr. Coolidge.

Her burden was eased by the knowledge that the loss of her husband was felt throughout the world. Hundreds of messages of sympathy poured into the Coolidge home. Practically every person who had been associated with Mr. Coolidge during his 60 years of life, sent an expression of sorrow.

Messages from the governors of almost all the States were received by Mrs. Coolidge. There were those from men and women who years ago had served and worked at the statehouse in Boston with Mr. Coolidge. There were those from leaders in affairs of the Nation, Charles G. Dawes, Andrew W. Mellon, Elihu Root. Others from men chosen to represent their country in foreign lands, Joseph Grew, Ambassador to Tokyo; Hugh Gibson, Ambassador to Belgium, and Walter Edge, Ambassador to France. More from President Machado of Cuba, and Sir Esme Howard, of England.

Tribute From Press.

The press did not forget Mr. Coolidge. For years his silence or his brevity had been a part of their existence and today they sent a large wreath bearing the words: "We covered our last Coolidge assignment with sorrow. From the reportorial and newsreel men of the country."

Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts left Boston for his home in nearby Westfield today after issuing an order closing the Statehouse during the services tomorrow.

Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire will be present and New Hampshire will also pay tribute to the son of her sister State, Vermont, with all flags at half-staff for 30 days and with members of the National Guard wearing mourning bands for 30 days.

Hoover Due This Morning.

Northampton will close its banks and its stores will operate with drawn shades tomorrow. Mayor Bliss considered closing all places of business, but finally decided that while Northampton in normal times is a prosperous city its merchants would suffer a loss if they closed their places on a Saturday, the biggest purchasing day in this vicinity.

"It is as Mr. Coolidge would wish it, I'm sure," he said.

President and Mrs. Hoover and a large delegation from Washington will reach Northampton at about 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. Most of the members of the Cabinet and representatives of both the House and Senate will accompany the Chief Executive on his trip. Many of those coming served under Mr. Coolidge, such as Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes and Justice Stone, who were members of the Coolidge Cabinet.

250 Cumberland Pupils Escape Blaze at School

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 6.—Several hours after the odor of smoke had been detected in the Maryland Avenue School Building, the oldest in the city, wisps were observed this afternoon, the fire bell was rung and the 250 grade pupils marched out of the building in drill order.

The fire, which had been burning several hours, burst through the second floor. It took several hours work by the firemen before it was subdued. Much damage was done by water. The building is a landmark, with tower and cupola. Miss Helen Albright is principal.

Settlement Made In Suit for Taxes

One of Largest Cases of Its Kind Reaches Compromise.

(Associated Press.)

United States Attorney David A. Ashworth, of the Southern District of West Virginia, yesterday announced a settlement has been reached in the tax suit of the New River Co. of West Virginia.

Ashworth obtained Attorney General Mitchell's approval of the settlement and then returned to Charleston to obtain approval of the United States District Court.

He declined to reveal the amount agreed upon in the settlement until final approval is obtained. The suit of the New River Co., asking a refund on taxes paid the Federal Government, is one of the largest tax suits ever filed in West Virginia.

MANY STATES HOLD PRESIDENTS' GRAVES

(Associated Press.)

The burial of Calvin Coolidge in his native hills at Plymouth, Vt., will add another to the unique national shrines scattered through the land—the graves of its Presidents.

Like the modest New Englander who served as the thirtieth Chief Executive of the United States, many of the Presidents returned in death to the soil which knew their tread as boys.

George Washington rests in the quiet of his beloved Mount Vernon, across the River from Washington, and 50 miles from Wakefield, where he was born.

Two of the more recent Presidents lie near the scene of their great endeavors—Woodrow Wilson in the National Cathedral at Washington, William Howard Taft in Arlington National Cemetery.

Lincoln Buried in Illinois.

At Springfield, Ill., where the young Abraham Lincoln practiced law, the martyred President of the Civil Dar is entombed.

The famous sepulchre of Ulysses S. Grant overlooks the Hudson from Riverside Drive in New York, where he spent his declining years. At Oyster Bay, on Long Island, Theodore Roosevelt rests from the labors of his strenuous life.

By strange coincidence, death came to John Adams and Thomas Jefferson, second and third presidents of the United States, on the same day—July 4, 1826.

Adams, the only President in history to reach the age of 90, was buried in a crypt under the first Parish Church at Quincy, Mass., where his son, John Quincy Adams, sixth of the Nation's Presidents, was to join him 22 years later.

Wrote Own Epitaph.

Jefferson's tomb at Monticello, his Virginia estate, bears an epitaph written by himself.

"Here was buried Thomas Jefferson," it reads, "author of the Declaration of American Independence, of the Statute of Virginia for religious freedom, and father of the University of Virginia."

James Madison, who followed Jefferson, was buried on his estate at Montpelier, Va. James Monroe was interred originally in New York City but in 1858, the centenary of his birth, the remains were transferred to Richmond, Va., where John Tyler also is buried.

Andrew Jackson and James K. Polk repose at Nashville, Tenn.; Martin Van Buren at Kinderbrook, N. Y., where he was born and died; William Henry Harrison at North Bend, Ohio.

Tomb at Marion, Ohio.

That famous old Indian fighter—Zachary Taylor—was buried at Springfield, Ky., near Louisville. Millard Fillmore lies at Buffalo, N. Y., where he passed his last few years. Franklin Pierce at Concord, N. H.; James Buchanan at Lancaster, Pa.; Andrew Johnson at Greenville, Tenn.; Rutherford B. Hayes at Fremont, Ohio.; James A. Garfield at Cleveland; Chester A. Arthur at Albany, N. Y.; Grover Cleveland at Princeton, N. J.; Benjamin Harrison at Indianapolis; William McKinley at Canton, Ohio, and Warren G. Harding at Marion, Ohio.

Now the man who succeeded Harding goes home, to the quiet of rural Vermont.

Flags Here to Remain At Halfstaff 30 Days

The District Commissioners yesterday issued an order that American flags on all municipal buildings shall remain at halfstaff during the 30-day mourning period established by President Hoover on account of the death of Calvin Coolidge.

All merchants and business houses also were requested to display flags in similar fashion until after the Coolidge funeral.

and ministers visited Secretary Stimson at the State Department to present the formal expressions of their governments.

Orders went forth to extend the observance of 30-day mourning around the world, wherever the flag of the United States is flown. Ships and shore stations of the Navy, garrisons and outposts of the Army, and every embassy and legation were instructed to fly the flag at half staff. The military and naval units at home and abroad fired a thirteen-gun salute after reveille yesterday morning, and the 48-gun salute to the Union immediately after retreat at sunset. In the interior a one-gun salute was discharged at half-hour intervals.

White House Closed.

Another 21-gun salute was ordered for the time of burial and all officers will wear a mourning band on their sleeve for the next 30 days.

The newspapermen who were assigned to the White House yesterday sent their personal expression to Mrs. Coolidge saying: "We are proud that we were permitted to have lived so closely with his time."

One of the evidences of mourning was that the presidential mansion was closed to the usual visitors and sightseers until after the funeral. The Cabinet met, as usual on Fridays, but little business was transacted and the conversation chiefly concerned the event which had so completely broken the routine of the Capital.

To Call at Coolidge Home.

Arrangements were made at the White House yesterday for the President and Mrs. Hoover to call at the Coolidge residence in Northampton today, after the funeral services, at the Jonathan Edwards Church, and express their sympathy personally to Mrs. Coolidge. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover then will entrain immediately for Washington, arriving here tonight.

Those who will accompany the Chief Executive and Mrs. Hoover are Chief Justice Hughes, Secretaries Stimson, Adams and Chapin, Justice Stone of the Supreme Court, Harry S. New, Postmaster General during the Coolidge administration; Everett Sanders, chairman of the Republican national committee; Lawrence Richey and Theodore Joslin, secretaries to the President, and Rudolph Forster, executive clerk at the White House for many years, who was close to Mr. Coolidge during his administration.

The Senate named 25 members of the funeral party. They were:

Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader; Smoot, of Utah; McNary, of Oregon; Hale and White, of Maine; Moses and Keyes, of New Hampshire; Reed and Davis, of Pennsylvania; Fess, of Ohio; Austin and Dale, of Vermont; Metcalf and Hebert, of Rhode Island; Bingham, of Connecticut.

The National Press Club named John F. Chester, of the Associated Press, and George E. Durno, of the International News Service, to represent the board of governors.

John Herrick, of the Chicago Tribune, and Coleman B. Jones, of the New York Herald Tribune, will represent the active membership, and Bascom Slemp, Senators Moses, Fess and Copeland, and Representatives Snell and Tinkham, the associate membership.

The board adopted a resolution of regret at the death of the former Chief Executive, a member of the club, and directed that an engraved copy be sent to Mrs. Coolidge.

A committee was directed to consider the placing of a membrial in the club to the memory of Mr. Coolidge and three other presidents who were members—Harding, Wilson and Taft.

Robbers Pick Defunct Bank, See Error, Exit

Rhineland, Mo., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Two robbers made the mistake of trying to rob a defunct bank here today when they entered the Rhineland Bank as a State bank examiner and a bank official were at work on the books.

The two robbers made a hasty exit when they learned they had picked the wrong bank, and escaped. The other bank in the town is the Farmers Savings Bank, which is open.

COOLIDGE FAVORED MUNICIPAL REFORM

Changes in Legal Procedure to Aid Fight on Crime Urged in 1930.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Calvin Coolidge in 1930 believed the greatest need of government in the United States was municipal reform. He said so in an article written October 11 of that year for the fiftieth anniversary number of the Buffalo Evening News. After saying that "very little change" was to be expected in the National Government because the "executive and legislative functions are on a sound foundation," he wrote that municipal governments, however, "in many instances are not a credit to us."

He wrote in part: "It is in this field (municipal government) that politics most frequently interferes with patriotism. The growing burden of taxation and the increasing complexity of municipal affairs will force an enlightened citizenship to greater activity in securing better administration of our city governments.

"Another element that will force the same result is the prevalence of crime in many large centers of population. * * * The first line of defense against crime is the police. The discipline of that force depends upon the mayor. Primarily, the crime question is a question of the attitude of the mayors of our cities."

He predicted that society in the future would demand changes in legal procedure making it easier to convict criminals. He wrote that "what was intended as a shield for the innocent has been converted into a protection for the guilty. Old methods will be discarded for a procedure that will be more effective in the protection of the rights of honest and law-abiding citizens."

He wrote that the only need in the national governmental set-up was improvement in "technique" of administering the Government and purification of elections in many localities, a reform which he said was greatly needed.

George V and Duce Wire Their Regrets

London, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—King George today sent the following message of condolence to Mrs. Calvin Coolidge: "The queen and I are deeply sorry to learn of your tragic and unexpected bereavement, and we hasten to assure you of our profound sympathy with you and your family in your irreparable loss."

Rome, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini today cabled President Hoover expressing his and the Italian government's regret at the death of Calvin Coolidge.

"I learn with great regret of the death of former President Coolidge, and desire to express to you, Mr. President, the sincerest condolences of the Italian government and myself personally over the loss of the eminent statesman," the message said.

PARAMOUNT-PUBLIX POST QUIT BY HERTZ

Became Finance Committee Head After Leading Coup in Stock Purchases.

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The long-rumored change in control of the Paramount-Publix Corporation came today with the resignation of John Hertz, omnibus magnate and turfman, as chairman of the finance committee.

As early as last fall, reports persisted in Wall street that Hertz would withdraw and that Adolph Zukor, the president, would assume the financial control of the picture company.

Hertz skyrocketed to power in Paramount-Publix in 1931 after he and the late William Wrigley, jr., led a group of Chicago capitalists in buying so heavily into the corporation's stock that the chairmanship of the financial committee was offered to Hertz.

Finances Closely Watched.

The financial condition of Paramount-Publix has been closely watched in recent months, there being heavy interest payments on loans due in the spring. Late in November, upon the occasion of denying that he was to resign, Hertz said that there were sufficient funds to meet the payments.

Hertz, who made millions out of the Yellow Taxicab Co. and organized numerous motor transportation companies into the omnibus corporation, issued the following statement:

"In November, 1931, at the suggestion of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and at the request of the president and board of directors of Paramount, I became a member of the board of directors of the company, and chairman of the finance committee. Since that time, I have been active in the management of the affairs of the corporation, devoting my entire time thereto.

"Has Accomplished Much."

"Whatever I have been able to accomplish in the company's affairs has been accomplished because I had the cooperation of all the officers and the organization without any question as to the technical limitations upon the authority of various officers. Within the last week a question has been raised by the president as to the authority of the chairman of the finance committee to continue to function as he had up to that time. I felt that I could not accomplish the purposes for which I came to the company unless I was permitted to so function, and therefore there was no alternative for me but to tender my resignation, which I have done."

The Paramount-Publix Corporation issued a brief statement, as follows: "During his 14 months as chairman of the finance committee * * * Mr. Hertz has accomplished much in the handling of the corporation's financial problems. The president and all the directors greatly regret that he now finds himself unable to continue to serve the corporation in that capacity."

Woman Dry Leader's Rezoning Plea Refused

Disapproval of the application for rezoning of property belonging to Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, prominent dry leader, on the Rockville pike, near Montrose, Md., was announced yesterday by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The property is at present zoned commercial because of commercial use prior to passage of the zoning laws making that area residential. Mrs. Nicholson is seeking permanent classification as commercial.

The petition now will be reviewed by the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners sitting as a zoning board. Mrs. Nicholson announced last night that she plans to continue her efforts to have the property rezoned. Building Inspector J. Fred Imirie has sworn out two warrants against her, alleging violation of the zoning laws and failure to obtain a permit to enlarge the store of a gasoline station on the property.

TAX SLASHES UNDER RITCHIE BASE URGED

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 6.—Determined to press their demands for a greater tax reduction than set forth in Gov. Albert C. Ritchie's message to the Legislature, representatives of fourteen Maryland counties and Baltimore City met here today to approve bills designed to lower taxes.

Among the bills approved was one to lower the minimum school tax to 40 cents, another to divert half the gas tax money to county road purposes, and a third to make a larceny of less than $25 a misdemeanor. A fourth measure, to turn back motor vehicle fines and license fees to the counties, has been approved in principle, but the proposed legislation has not been drafted.

All counties in the State were represented at the meeting except Montgomery, Prince Georges, Calvert, Charles, Alleghany, Howard, Harford, and Cecil. Howard County, however, sent word that it was in sympathy with the meeting and was marked present. Today was the first open meeting at which Baltimore City was represented, only county commissioners being present at the earlier gathering.

In calling for meetings in each county on January 14, J. H. C. Legg, president of the County Commissioners Association, said: "We don't have to find new revenues, we can cut down expenses. They say that some salaries are fixed by the constitution, but we can change the constitution." He also objected to calling the gas tax money "State money," saying it belonged to the taxpayers, and reminded the legislators that the State roads commission could not reelect them. The county meetings will be held to acquaint the citizens with the program of the association.

Division of Opinion.

Mr. Legg's comments were brought out by the fight between two factions as to whether the counties or the commission should have control of the gas tax money to be diverted to the county roads. Gov. Ritchie proposed that 1½ cents of the 2-cent gas tax be turned over to the county, with the commission to do the actual road work. The meeting today asked that 1 cent of the tax be turned over to the commission, the rest to go to the State as a whole. Thirty per cent of this would go to Baltimore, the rest to be divided among the counties according to a schedule which will be made up later. The division schedule is based partly on road mileage in each county and partly on the population of the county.

Want Deficit Figured In.

During discussion of the measure to reduce the school tax, a suggestion was made to relieve the county of the burden of uncollectable taxes. At present, it was said, the State when it figures the equalization fund, takes it for granted that the county can collect taxes from all the assessed valuation. When this can not be done, it was said, the county gains no additional money from the equalization fund to make up the deficit. No action was taken to remedy the situation, however. The measure calling for a reduction of the minimum school tax did not suggest means of raising the additional funds which the State would have to contribute to the county systems.

The third measure approved today will cut the size of the semiannual Circuit Court docket by nearly one-half. It provides that for stealing less than $25 an accused person may be tried by a magistrate, without waiting for action of the Circuit Court and grand jury. Previously the limit has been $5, and persons accused of taking more were charged with grand larceny. The new law will be in line with similar legislation in other States, where the dividing line between grand and petty larceny is set at from $25 to $50.

Memphis Section Will Escape Flood

Mississippi Valley Rivers Recede as Rains Spare Area.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Dry weather and less turbulent tributary streams restored calm to the lowlanders today and the mighty Mississippi River lost much of the ominous appearance it had assumed for days.

Barring heavy rains, the big stream will not reach flood stage at Memphis, as had been predicted. The Weather Bureau announced today that the Mississippi would crest at Memphis January 11, with a stage of not more than 33.5 feet. Flood stage is 35 feet, and would send the Mississippi backing up many of its already overfilled tributaries. Approximately 350 families have been made homeless by flood waters pouring through five breaks in the St. Francis River on the Arkansas-Missouri line, but that stream dropped sharply during the day and engineers are repairing crevasses.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The Wabash River apparently reached the crest of its rise today at 5.2 feet above flood stage of 16 feet. The lower bottom lands are covered with water, but no serious damage has been done.

Indemnity Group In Receivership

4 New Orleans Insurance Companies Complain of Heavy Losses.

New Orleans, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Four insurance companies of the Union Indemnity group, one of the largest liability concerns in the South, were placed in receivership today. The action involved the Union Indemnity Co., the LaSalle Fire Insurance Co., the Insurance Securities Co., Inc., and the Union Tittle Guarantee Co.

The companies had been the chief underwriters of security bonds for State highway and bridge contractors, including the Mississippi River Bridge here, and handled most of the surety business of the last two State administrations—Long's and Allen's.

The companies were thrown into receivership in four separate actions that came in rapid succession. W. Irving Moss, president of the Union Indemnity Co., said in a statement that the receiverships were forced by recession in business and unusual underwriters' losses. Officials said policy holders would be protected in full by transfer of the policies to the Aetna Insurance group. Clay W. Beckner, automobile dealer, and S. Sanford Levy, vice president of Union Indemnity Co., were named receivers for the four companies.

Confederate Burial Plots May Be Sold

Reed Bill Provides for the Transfer or Surrender of 4 Cemeteries.

The sale of four Confederate cemeteries which have been abandoned or from which bodies of veterans have been removed, as specified in the Reed bill, was favorably reported yesterday by the Senate military affairs committee.

Plots to be sold are Confederate lot in Greenlawn Cemetery, Indianapolis, Ind., from which bodies have been removed to Crown Hill Cemetery; Confederate Cemetery at Point Lookout, Md., which has been abandoned; Falls Bluff National Cemetery, near Leesburg, Va., and the soldiers' lot, Camp Dennison, Ohio, from which the bodies have been removed.

The bill recommends that the bodies now interred at the Falls Bluff Cemetery be moved to Alexandria, Va.

Still Shooting Victim Is Reported Improved

The condition of Thomas Pinkney, shot Thursday in a raid on a still near Forestville, Md., was reported as "improved" at Casualty Hospital last night as J. J. Crowley, chief of the Prince Georges County police, said that he would ask for an official statement from two of his men who were with the raiding party.

Pinkney, a colored man, was shot when police descended on a 100-gallon still in the Maryland woods. He was taken to Casualty Hospital and was reported in a serious condition several hours. No report was made by police, and neither county policemen could be reached for a statement last night. Forest Smith, of Forestville, was arrested after the raid and charged with manufacture and possession of liquor. He was released on a bond of $100.

The Federal Diary

By GEORGE D. RILEY

RILEY.

A WHILE back we commented on condition of flags floating above Weightman and Stevens Schools. Later we passed Magruder School, M and Seventeenth streets northwest. That flag was fairly clean and in good condition. Sumner Building, next to it, displayed another of those flags that looked like it had tried to weather a sand or sleet storm without much luck.

The flag flying from the Board of Education offices, Franklin School Building, simply was (and still is) something to belong. It had more ragged ends than the other flags combined. One would think the national anthem was "Raggedy Ann."

Not to be too practical, but we have a change of curtains, draperies and in our personal attire we do change shirts, collars, after they show soil. And we do darn the rips when they appear in other goods.

The main purpose, aside from telling the world that the Stars and Stripes float over Government-maintained buildings, is to impress the rising generation with the proper reverence for the banner that has been through so many trying experiences. Is it an inspiration for a youngster to lift his eyes to the flag pole, repeat, "This is my own, my native land," and then be greeted with a dirty flag, tattered and flapping undecidedly and temperamentally, depending upon which way the tatters take their course?

Is it economy that has forced these soiled emblems to stick to their waste? We are told white in the standard represents purity. Some of those flags long since have lost their white. The white has become gray. And the red and blue could just as easily be dubbed other colors and there couldn't be any argument.

If it is economy that forces dirty, slivered flags to stay perched on Uncle Sam's schools, then let us be wasteful for the nonce.

"I'll never recall it," mused Swarmi Fedd.

"Perhaps," he thought, "it would be better this time to remove the letter from the envelope and ask for directions, simply by displaying the addressed envelope. This is did. That is to say, he did remove the letter and he didn't show it, until he hailed a taxicab driver. He held the empty envelope before the driver's eyes, as though he thought the chauffeur were nearsighted.

"Say, I can't read this, this is French and I'm from the States. My Dad said I'd have to make my return passage home as best I could and I'm driving till I can get the last 157 francs. Say let's be frank and earnest. You be Frank and I'll be Ernest. French is Greek to me."

At this point let us remember that Swarmi was traveling light. He had lost all his luggage and contents in that last wild scramble, where he chased down to the nearest gendarme's station. As far as money was desired, he still had some on hand, at least he had concealed it in his shoe, so he couldn't really kick.

We've often heard the expression "till the cows come home." Now we can see them "when the cows come home," through medium of a 35 mm. record sound on-film motion picture with a lecture by Dr. J. C. McDowell, dairy industry, Department of Agriculture.

THOSE who know Pansie Willson, of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, Navy Department, remark the continuous absence of a hat. Even though she may be garbed in a fur coat, this charming assistant to the chief of the records division never wears a hat.

One former Yeoman F, and Miss Willson was one herself, serving in the Secretary's office during the war—guesses that wearing the heavy headpiece that was part of the Yeoman F uniform was enough to last a lifetime.

Stocks of Bicentennial stamps and stamped envelopes will continue to be sold as long as the supplies last, although manufacture was discontinued October 1, F. A. Tilton, Third Assistant Postmaster General, says.

Clark, president, Hospital Guild, and barytone, will be heard. Sophocles Papas will supply entertainment, E. C. Hooper tells us.

It'll be the tenth anniversary celebration. Place, 2400 Sixteenth street northwest. National officers, with the executive committee, will be birthday party guests.

It'll be adieu to Washington for William B. Hudson, confidential secretary to Fourth Assistant Postmaster General John W. Philip, and howdy-do to Dallas, Tex., his former home. Mr. Hudson will return to the Lone Star State soon as inspector of stations.

Mr. Hudson came to Washington in 1929 to join Mr. Philip, who formerly was postmaster in Dallas and where Mr. Hudson had served with his present chief. Best wishes, Mr. Hudson.

"I'll probably subscribe to The Washington Post if they continue to run pictures like that about the fish with the toothache," T. G. Gale, Airways, tells us.

Mr. Gale may as well get ready for some more of those good pictures. We've got stacks of good ones coming.

LACK OF VITAMIN A AIDS COLDS THRIVE

Health Angle of Butter Is Further Supported by New Data.

By MARTHA LOGAN.

Recently, nutritionists have decided that lack of that amazing substance vitamin A has a great influence on the tendency to contract colds. In studies with groups of children it was found that those who suffered most often from colds were getting only a small amount of vitamin A foods. As soon as a large amount of this vitamin in the form of extra amounts of butter fat was added to the food which they ate daily, their general physical condition improved.

We have valued good butter in the past for its excellent flavor, palatability, usefulness, and now we are informed the health angle is further supported. It is a good thing, since we have so many uses for it, that the manufacture of butter has developed into such an outstanding development of the great dairy industry of our Nation. In this vast industry that has grown up, we little realize all the tasks that go into making butter, which is sweet, pure and also always available. No "rule of thumb," or just a "handful of salt" is used in determining the method for high-quality butter.

Old Days of Uncertainty.

Back in the days when every family had a brown-eyed family cow and every milk house had a big blue pan with thick yellow cream, the butter was often churned by hand. There was no way of regulating the keeping quality or of knowing what the finished product would be. If you were an experienced butter maker, or there were no thunderstorms, and you had plenty of time to devote—the butter was made. The finished product was a gamble also. If all the curd had not been washed out, the lovely looking pat of butter was sour next morning.

But the duties at home were many and the butter-making process needed speeding up, so the cream separator was invented to take the place of the blue pan (often a dust catcher) in the milk house. As the farmers bought the cream separators, they found it better business to produce more milk and sell the cream.

Herds Must Be Model.

That good cream makes good butter is a truism. The herds which furnish the cream from which good butter is made by reliable large scale creameries must be model in every respect. The herds must not only be model, but the farm well operated, and the methods of handling the milk and cream the most scientific and sanitary.

Today the farmer sells his cream directly to the creamery, or if he is not close to such a creamery, sells it to a local cream buyer. The local cream buyer weighs cream, tests it, pays for it and reships it to the creamery that he is representing. When it arrives at the creamery, it is again weighed, tested and graded for quality.

At the creamery, after the grading for quality, the cream is pasteurized to destroy bacteria and further to insure the keeping quality of the butter.

Martha Logan Says—"Try Cranberry Pot Roast"

Martha Logan has solved the monotony of unembellished pot roast. Cranberry pot roast, with buttered whole carrots and steamed yams or sweet potatoes, she declares, will make a regal feast with a marked lack of strain on the family purse string.

Market Meanderings

By MILDRED REED BUNDY

Market on Lower Seventh Street Offers Bargains in Fowl and Game; Fresh Strawberries Within Reach of Depleted Purses; Pecans Are Cheap.

A busy market on lower Seventh street, convenient to the shopping district and to Government buildings, is attracting customers with its low prices for good food. Today, and while they last, one of the best-known brands of ham is selling there for 10 cents a pound. Strictly fresh guaranteed eggs are but 40 cents a dozen in this market. Stewing chickens have been selling there for 35 cents each, regardless of their weight, and naturally have sold rapidly at such a price.

Ready-to-use foods, such as cold meats, are low priced and popular in this shop. An excellent grade of sliced tongue is but 30 cents a pound and other cold meats are not higher than 25 or 30 cents for a pound. Four varieties of sliced cheese—pimento, Swiss, American and brick—of standard grades are 30 cents a pound. Cabbage salad, nicely seasoned, is 17 cents a pound.

A few steps from the market just mentioned is an outdoor fruit market where strawberries are 40 cents a quart, 23 cents a pint and Stayman Winesap apples are 3 pounds for 17 cents.

Long-stalked, brilliant red rhubarb growing in hothouses in New York State and Michigan is coming into Washington this week. Dealers in the Southwest Market, where it is being received say it is the best quality rhubarb they have ever seen.

Cuban okra, large podded and tender; large pineapples from Puerto Rico; tomatoes from the famous hothouses in Ashtabula, Ohio; paper-shell pecans in 2-pound bags for 35 cents; immense green peppers, 75 cents a basket and Stayman Winesap apples, $1.15 a bushel are among the best food values the Meanderer found in the Southwest Market this week.

More than 50 Washington women showed their interest in a farm-to-home market described in Market Meanderings, by calling The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 52, to ask the location of the market. Many of the women who called visited the market, much to the gratification of the women in charge. Today at this market, Maryland beaten biscuits and fluffy lemon tarts are to be featured. Other fresh foods at attractive prices found there include butter, sweet or salted, 35 cents a pound; fresh-killed turkeys, weighed only after being carefully dressed and made ready for cooking, 30 cents a pound; and rabbits, also meticulously prepared for cooking, 35 cents each.

Highly interesting is a method of preparing Turkish coffee sent to the Meanderer by a man reader! Incidentally men are showing a lively interest in Market Meanderings, as many of the telephone calls received are from men, and a good percentage of the letters the Meanderer receives are from men. This gentleman who knows about Turkish coffee has watched the Orientals make it and also has learned about this very black brew from exclusive hotels in New York. The recipe he has sent the Meanderer does not agree with the recipe she was able to get locally. The kind Turkish coffee-wise correspondent is willing to have the Meanderer pass the recipe along to all those who write for it. Address the Market Meanderer, The Washington Post, inclosing stamped envelope for reply.

Cuts of good quality fresh beef are selling at extremely low prices in one set of chain stores. Prime ribs of beef are tagged 18 cents and short ribs are 8 cents a pound. Tomatoes, too, are a special value in this same chain store, selling three pounds for 25 cents. A standard grade of canned tomatoes has been reduced to 5 cents a can in these stores. Yellow-skinned onions are four pounds for 12 cents, and white squash is but 5 cents a pound.

Home-made devil's food cake, full of pecans and richly iced, costs 50 cents today in a certain popular bake shop of Fourteenth street. This cake ordinarily sells for 75 cents. Other toothsome offerings are fruit bars, two dozen for 29 cents, the same kind that sells for 25 cents a dozen at other times, and pecan rings, 25 cents for Saturday, usually sold for 40 cents.

Telephone questions about Market Meanderings to The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 52, or address the Market Meanderer, The Washington Post, inclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope for reply.

Open Hearings on Black Beer Bill Next Thursday

Open hearings on the Black beer-for-revenue bill will be held before the House District judiciary subcommittee next Thursday morning at 10:30 a. m., Chairman Vincent L. Palmisano announced yesterday.

Every one who wants to be heard will be given an opportunity, said the wet subcommittee chairman. He favors House action on the bill, so that it might reach the President's desk for signature with the Collier national beer bill, if and when that measure is approved by the Senate.

SPOON BREAD RECIPE POST PRIZE WINNER

Southern Favorite an Ideal Base for Breakfast on Cold Mornings.

Bitter cold mornings require substantial breakfasts and for the staff of life course of the first meal of the day few products of the oven excel that famous Southern delicacy—spoon bread.

A recipe for the preparation of the genuine spoon bread of the South is awarded the $5 prize this week. It was submitted by Mrs. Bobbie Hill, Apartment 21, 1434 Harvard street northwest, and follows:

1 cup cornmeal (District Grocery)
2 cups cold water
2 teaspoons salt (Kidwell's)
1 cup milk (Sealect Evaporated, Sanitary)
3 eggs (New Center Market)
2 tablespoons fat (New Center Market)

Mix the meal, water and salt, and boil for five minutes, stirring constantly. Add milk, well beaten eggs, melted fat and mix well. Pour in well greased baking dish or ramekins and bake for 45 to 50 minutes in a hot oven. Serve right from the oven while very hot.

Especially nice for lunch or with a vegetable dinner.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By COL. GOODBODY

OYSTERS A LA RECTOR

TO my mind George Rector is America's foremost authority of the preparation of seafood. Rector's restaurants in New York and Chicago had a reputation among epicures for many of their specialties but the outstanding dishes were those made from oysters or fish.

Rector's was the first restaurant to introduce oysters in Chicago. George told me about the excitement that prevailed when the first barrel of oysters "reposing in their own mother-of-pearl thrones" arrived in his restaurant. A group of outstanding epicures had gathered in honor of the occasion. There was a hushed silence as the first oyster was opened. And when it was found that the bivalve had successfully survived the trip, great hurrahs arose from the assembled guests.

Mr. Rector has given me a few of his best oyster recipes.

Oyster Cocktail.

Serve 6 oysters on the half shell to each portion. Arrange them on a bed of finely chopped ice. Garnish each plate with a sprig of parsley and a piece of lemon.

Cocktail Sauce.

¾ cup tomato catsup
¼ cup grated horseradish
1 tablespoon Worcesterahire sauce
2 tablespoons strained lemon juice
10 drops tabasco sauce
¼ teaspoon salt

Oyster Stew.

Allow 8 medium-sized oysters for each portion. Place them in a small saucepan with ¼ cup strained oyster liquor. Season with salt and a pinch of cayenne, and bring to a quick boil. Boil 1 minute. Skim top and add 1 cup hot milk and ½ cup cream. Bring to a boil, remove from fire, add 1 tablespoon fresh butter and pour it into a soup tureen. Sprinkle top with paprika and serve with oyster crackers.

Fried Oysters a la Rector.

Allow 6 or 8 medium-sized oysters for each portion. Drain, reserve liquor, season with salt and a few grains of cayenne. Roll in cracker meal and dip in egg beaten with 2 tablespoons strained oyster liquor, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire and ½ teaspoon English mustard. Then roll in bread crumbs mixed with an equal quantity of finely shredded crabmeat. Fry in clarified butter until nicely browned. Arrange on a hot platter and garnish with parsley and quartered lemon.

FRANCE IS DELIGHTED.

The French press is delighted with the speech delivered by Senator Borah in the Senate on Wednesday. It is regarded as an expression of approval of France's action in defaulting payment on the war debt. Le Temps remarks that the speech is of the utmost importance, as justifying one of the principal French arguments.

Ever since the visit of Premier Laval to Washington, an effort has been made in France to convince the world that President Hoover virtually promised that if Germany's creditors would wipe out reparations the United States would revise the war debts. It is to be noted that M. Laval himself has made no such representations. But Senator Borah encouraged this French propaganda on Wednesday by insisting that there must have been some understanding between President Hoover and Premier Laval whereby France was warranted in believing that when she had cancelled reparations she would be rewarded by equivalent cancellation of her debt to the United States.

The Lausanne agreement was made conditional upon negotiations looking to reduction of the war debts. In the British House of Commons the assertion was made that the Lausanne agreement was made with the advice and counsel of representatives of the United States Government. This statement was specifically denied by Secretary Stimson, and the British government then disavowed it. In his letter to Senator Borah last summer President Hoover stated that the United States had not been consulted regarding the Lausanne agreement, and was not a party to or in any way committed to such agreement.

Not a single senator supported Senator Borah in regard to remarks which he said had been made by President Hoover at a conference with senators just before the arrival of M. Laval, indicating a wish that the senators would "approve of any conversation which he had and any agreement which he reached with Laval."

With the exception of Senator Borah, it does not appear that any one qualified to deal officially with the question believes that the United States has been drawn into any understanding which binds it to revise or cancel the war debts in return for cancellation of German reparations. It is unfortunate that Senator Borah does not produce the proof, if he possesses any, which warrants him in insisting that France has adopted its peculiar policy as a result of assurances by the United States.

Any undertaking by the President of the United States looking to revision of the war debts would be contingent upon the approval of Congress. In the joint statement made by President Hoover and Premier Laval it was specified that both governments made all reservations as to the terms and conditions upon which any agreement regarding intergovernmental payments might be considered. M. Laval was exceedingly anxious to preserve the Young plan against possible impairment resulting from an extension of the Hoover moratorium. He found no objection on the part of the President to the initiation of the negotiations which resulted in the Lausanne agreement. The United States was not concerned with this matter, which related solely to "the European powers principally concerned within the framework of the agreements existing prior to July 1, 1931."

The French government can not plead incapacity to pay debt installments. It has dodged the question of capacity to pay, which is the only basis upon which the United States would consent to revise the debts. If the debtors could be organized into a bloc, to present a united front to the United States, France would be merged with the others, and the question of her individual capacity to pay would be obscured. France, therefore, has made every effort to organize this bloc. It strongly urged Great Britain to withhold payment on Dec. 15. The United States has insisted that each debtor should be dealt with separately. The Lausanne agreement attempts to present a united front against the United States, so that France may evade the question as to her capacity to pay her debt to the United States. The French press is grateful for any help that may come from the United States, but Senator Borah's speech fails to reveal that he had any facts upon which to base the statements that have been hailed with such enthusiasm in France.

THE DEMOCRATIC PROGRAM.

Democratic leaders who met with President-elect Roosevelt in New York Thursday night agreed upon a program of taxation and economy that would substantially balance the budget. An attempt will be made to put this program into effect before March 4. Prospects for wiping out the Federal deficit are brighter than they have been since Congress enacted the revenue act of 1930.

The decision to increase income taxes in the lower brackets is a courageous move. Heavier imposts upon moderate incomes is the only practical alternative to the sales tax, if the budget is to be balanced. Mr. Roosevelt's opposition killed the sales tax. As soon as he spoke out against it plans for its consideration by the House ways and means committee were abandoned. The sales tax is now completely out of the picture. If the budget is to be balanced, Congress must reverse the position it took last year and vote higher taxes on moderate incomes.

No attempt will be made by the Democratic leaders to increase surtaxes. Such levies are unproductive because of the drastic shrinkage of large incomes. Of course the proposed new normal tax rates would apply to the large incomes, but most of the increased revenue would come from individuals with moderate incomes.

Individuals with lass than $5,000 per year income paid only $7,325,000 into the Treasury in 1931, or a little more than 3 per cent of the total income tax. Most of the income tax receipts were drawn from incomes of $25,000 and over. Taxes on 1932 incomes were substantially increased last July, but wealthy individuals continue to pay most of the revenue. In this emergency it is quite proper that moderate incomes should be drawn upon to make up the Government's deficit.

It is interesting to note that the Democratic leaders have adopted the program advocated by Andrew W. Mellon when he was Secretary of the Treasury. About two years ago Mr. Mellon stated that the Government's revenue was unstable because it was drawn principally from large incomes that are subject to wide fluctuation. He urged Congress to broaden the base of the income tax by lowering the exemptions. Congress ignored his suggestion at the time, but the Democratic leaders have now accepted it as the only practical means of raising enough money to meet the heavy drain upon the Treasury.

Apparently the Democratic leaders have abandoned the plan to balance the budget by paying for public works with new bonds. No trace of that scheme may be found in the announced conclusions of the New York conference. The result is to strengthen hope that subterfuges will be cast aside and that a straight-forward attempt to balance the budget will be made.

The greatest difficulty facing this new movement is possible opposition within Democratic party ranks. Democrats consistently fought proposals for higher taxes in the lower income brackets last year. A high degree of courage, patriotism and cooperation will be required to enact the program that emerged from the New York conference. Speaker Garner intimates that he may advocate a program of his own. If leading members of the conference group are going to revert to their own pet schemes, there is not much hope of putting over the broader income tax.

The fate of this program will be a test of the new national leadership that may cast a beacon or a shadow over the next administration.

THE MOTOR INDUSTRY.

In 1932, the third year of the depression, Americans bought fewer cars than during any year in the past nineteen. Nevertheless, they did spend $1,250,000,000 for automobiles. The manufacturers complain, however, that only about half of this amount went for new cars. The demand for used cars has been greater than ever before. The number of second-hand machines and the number of cars that are being kept in service longer than usual are factors that are building up a potential demand for new cars that will be very heavy.

Last year only 1,200,000 passenger cars were sold. This is the lowest record since 1914, when the capacity of American production was only 1,500,000 cars yearly. The fact that plants capable of turning out more than 5,000,000 cars were so largely idle resulted in a loss to the industry for the year that will amount to more than $30,000,000. The average production was only slightly more than 20 per cent of capacity. Manufacturers are hoping for an increased demand that will raise output this year to about 1,600,000 automobiles and trucks.

In common with other lines of industry, motor plants have made drastic reductions in overhead and operating expenses. If conditions should improve so that buying during 1933 should reach 2,000,000 cars, most of the companies would begin to realize profits. It will not be necessary for factories to get back to the peak production of 1929 in order to earn fair returns. Economies and elimination of obsolescent plants and machinery will bring dividends on half the former maximum business.

The comparatively slight reduction in the number of cars in use during the depression shows how absolutely motor transportation has become an every-day necessity to the American people. The first sure indications of restored business stability will be the signal for heavy purchases of automobiles. Not only is a new crop of buyers ready for first cars, but it is estimated that there are no less than 4,000,000 cars still running that should be on the scrap heap.

LIFE SPAN OF PRESIDENTS.

The death of former President Coolidge, at the age of only 60 years, leads the Nation to contemplate once more the heavy strain that is placed upon every President. A tragic rule that ex-Presidents do not survive their experience in the White House by many years is being established. Although the Presidents in recent years have not been old men, no ex-President is now alive. That fact is grim testimony of the terrific strain to which the Chief Executive is subjected.

Mr. Coolidge was expected to be an exception to the rule. He had a wiry physique and he led a quiet and simple life. But the arduous work that he was called upon to perform from 1923 to 1929 had left its marks upon him. When an emergency came his reserve strength was not equal to it.

Statistical and medical authorities agree that the United States brings its Presidents to premature death. Dr. Louis I. Dublin, chief statistician for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, claims that "no President of modern times seems to enjoy the full expectancy of life." In the early days of the Republic the task of the Chief Executive was not so arduous. With a few exceptions the early Presidents lived to ripe old ages. As an average they lived longer than the average citizen of that time. But Dr. Dublin's charts show that the Presidents since the Civil War have lived, on the average, nine years less than their normal life expectancy.

Such is the price exacted of any man who aspires to the highest office in the world. Yet no citizen hesitates to seek the Presidency for that reason. Men of Presidential caliber are willing to sacrifice their peace of mind, to expend their energy to the utmost, and, if necessary, to sacrifice their lives in the service of their country. The burdens of the Presidency might be lightened somewhat, but it will continue to be the most onerous job in the world. Only those who are willing to place their health and their freedom on the altar of their country's welfare should apply for the honor of being President.

A veto of the Philippine bill may delay independence, but it will keep the Filipinos from going broke.

The forgotten man would just as soon remain forgotten, when it comes to paying an income tax.

THE BUDGET GHOST DANCE

From the Springfield Republican.

Analysis of the Federal budget estimates for the next fiscal year shows that while a total of $3,500,000,000 is called for, the actual operating cost of the civil Government is calculated at about $600,000,000. This figure is found by excluding expenditures for the District of Columbia, for public works, for the Army and Navy, for the Veterans' Bureau, for interest on the public debt and sinking fund.

The biggest items are: Interest and sinking fund for public debt, $1,260,000,000; Veterans' Bureau, pensions and allowances, $931,000,000. The cost of the Army and Navy in the budget is estimated at $584,000,000.

The fiscal tragedy is that it seems exceedingly difficult, if not impossible, to scale down the "untouchables" in the budget—that is, the service on the public debt and the expenditure on veterans who suffer from no disabilities originating in war. These two items of expenditure aggregate more than $2,000,000,000 in the next fiscal year, according to the present estimates. As for the public debt, chiefly of war origin, no one proposes to repudiate it or to scale it down, or to default on interest payments.

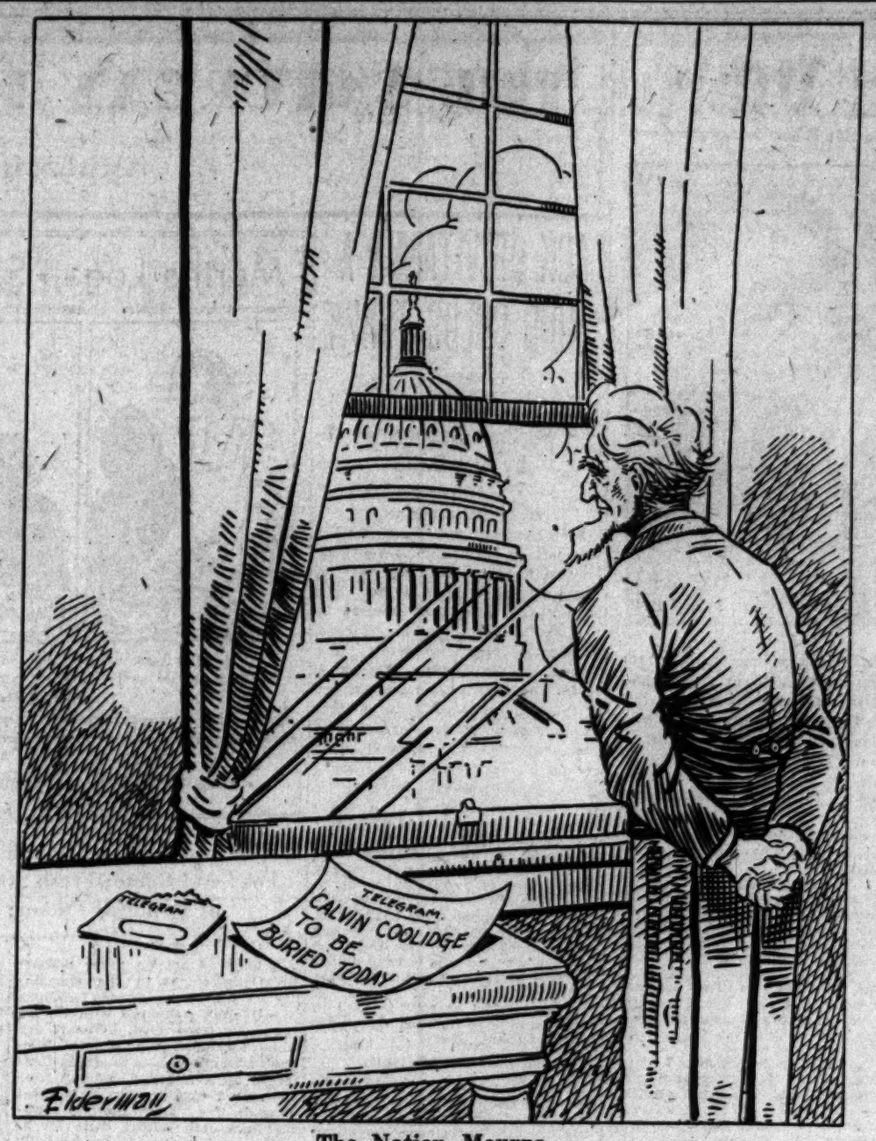
The Federal budget could be made to balance in the near future if the expenditures on veterans could be cut in two. It is estimated that $435,000,000 a year could be saved right now simply by cutting out payments for veterans' disabilities not originating in military service. These payments will steadily increase if not checked. The outlook is alarming in view of the new claims for these gratuities rapidly piling up in the Veterans' Bureau. The National Economy League has started a reform campaign, but without very good prospects of early success.

The American republic is in more danger than any other government in the world of being destroyed by the surcharges of its wars in the form of veterans' pensions, disability allowances, hospital care and other kinds of veterans' aid, relief and gratuities.

For the first time in American history our people can now see most clearly what wars are doing to impair their Government's financial structure and blight the broad serviceableness of its civil departments and activities. "Balancing the budget" is a ghost dance, under present conditions, with war setting the tune.

THE MOTORING AGE.

Several automobile accidents lately have been caused by youthful drivers, says the Cleveland Press. Boys of 15 and 16 should not be allowed to drive motor cars unless they have the motorist's average mental age of 7.



The Nation Mourns.

POST HASTE.

Opposition to a sales tax and a boost of taxes on low incomes, gasoline, beer, bread, pork and cotton makes the taxpayer dizzy.

As a result of 25 years of effort and the absence of Mr. Schafer the District seems to be in a fair way to effect a street car merger.

It takes a lot of financial education to improve the vision of congressmen who see through the Glass bill darkly.

The latest Western farm bloc seems very effective in blocking farm tax sales.

Peanut politics has been heard of for a long time, but we now get a practical demonstration as the goober growers descend upon Congress and demand to be included in the bounty bill.

The dictatorial powers of the farm allotment bill would give the Secretary of Agriculture authority that would make the President look like an office boy.

Now, Congress, you'll be careful and not spoil the good prospects for floating a big Federal refunding issue at 3¼ per cent, will you not?

If four agricultural products think they can be put on a preferential dole they will find that is not the general idea of a new deal.

If the House looks with equanimity upon a farm bonus that adds 15 per cent to the cost of the average loaf of bread, let's just change the name of the sales levy to a manufacturers' allotment and it will slide right through.

The forgotten man will find that the new deal has not overlooked him when the next income tax collector comes round.

The voyagers to New York went laden with brief cases bulging with exhibits on many subjects, but it seems that by the time they were told, time was up for telling.

What is party platform unanimity for repeal conventions to a Blaine committee?

Those thrifty New England farmers, with 90 per cent of their farms unmortgaged, figure it out that to garner about $20,000 in wheat bounties under the allotment plan will cost them more than $2,000,000 in higher prices.

The Senate dressed up naked repeal until Speaker Garner finds his nude art a suggestive hoyden.

The question before the House: Was it meet that the legislative menu should be cooked up by a baker's dozen? PAUL HUDSON.

ANT STOPPED TRAIN.

To the well-known reputation of ants for industry and perseverance, says Railway Age, add the ability to stop trains. One lone ant recently enjoyed the distinction of stopping the southbound "Flamingo," of the Louisville & Nashville. What is more, he did it the easiest way, merely by causing an automatic signal to display a stop indication.

A colony of large red ants established residence in the sheet-iron case that houses the signal mechanism. One ant, which apparently possessed an investigative type of mind, had started on a tour of exploration and had got himself caught between the contacts of the circuit-breaker, thus preventing the current from reaching the motor which operates the semaphore arm. This interference, of course, made the signal inoperative, so that it automatically assumed the stop position.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY dear Louise:

Some years ago I knew a young lady who fell in love with a fickle lad and lost him to a rival. Whether her heart or her pride suffered more I do not know, but for weeks she wept and would not be comforted.

Being jilted is an unpleasant experience and I hope you shall never go through it. There is no infallible method of protecting yourself, but you won't be an easy victim if you will accept your old dad's advice.

The first thing to remember is that falling in love is largely a matter of propinquity. Young people who are often together may have no thought of anything more serious than mild friendship, and then, Presto! the thing has happened. Remember that. Don't go with a boy too much, and risk falling in love, unless you know you can trust him.

Item No. 2: Not once in a blue moon is a girl jilted by a modest, bashful, he-man kind of fellow who is a little afraid of all women. You can risk falling in love with one of these, for he will play square.

But you can't trust one of the conceited lads. He is the villain in the play. He loves himself so well that he can't love anybody else very much, and if you go with him and thereby risk falling in love, prepare to nurse a broken heart.

How can you avert such disaster? It is very simple.

In common with all your sex, you doubtless know that the easiest way to win a man's interest is to brag on him. All men like feminine flattery—even the bashful he-man who plays square.

But the conceited fellows likes it better than he can like a girl. In fact, he may think he is in love with a girl when he is merely enraptured by her praise.

If ever you are so unfortunate as to pal with a youth who thinks himself a boy wonder, give him a trial before friendship advances too far.

Assuming that you have perceived his appetite for praise and fed it more or less, try the experiment of starving it. Continue to be friendly, but for one solid month refrain from giving him a single word or look of approval.

If he is fond of you for your own sake, he will be loyal still. If he merely loves your flattery, he will quickly lose interest. And you will be safely quit of him in time. Love, DAD.

POLITICAL COMMENT

Carrying the Argument Further.

Kansas City Star.

Since the clinching argument for the beer bill is needed Government revenue, it stands to reason that the more revenue the better. That consideration is reinforced by the fact that in certain quarters about Washington beer is the big reliance for balancing the budget. Beer can't do anything of the kind, but if it can be legalized under the Constitution, it can help. Hence Senator Borah's proposal of an excess profits tax on the brewers, who expect to make a lot of money, is eminently in order.

Mr. Borah holds to his reservations about the constitutionality of beer, but he has no misgivings about the advisability of the tax on brewers. And who except the gentlemen affected, could object to it? The tax would be paid only on condition the profits were realized, as they surely will be, according to the advance calculations of the enthusiasts.

Free Hand for Roosevelt.

Springfield Union.

President-elect Roosevelt is entirely right in saying, as reported, that the reorganization of the Federal Government in the interests of economy can be successfully accomplished only by the use of full authority of the Executive, if he means that Congress must not only acquiesce in the proposed reorganization, but at the Executive's bidding repeal acts by which superfluous bureaus or boards have been created. If Mr. Roosevelt can so successfully impose his will on Congress as to put it in such an accommodating mood, he will achieve what no other President has been able to achieve recently.

Consolidation Blocked.

Minneapolis Journal.

At this very moment there is before Congress a far-reaching plan for the consolidation, transfer or abolition of numerous misplaced or unnecessary Government agencies. It would save millions of dollars. It would increase the efficiency of the governmental machine enormously. This plan has been submitted by President Hoover under the terms of a cautious permit issued to him by Congress, providing that such executive orders would go into effect unless Congress itself, within 60 days from the time of announcement, took action in forbiddance. Will that plan be allowed to go into effect in February? It will not. Already resolutions of forbiddance are in preparation and will in due time be adopted. It simply wouldn't do to let Mr. Hoover effect this great reform.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mind Above Machine, if Masses Will but Think and Create.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Society is suffering not from the chaos of a machine-age, but from the confusion of a machine-mind. The mind of the few made the machines for the many. Let us get the mind opened socially and creatively and the machine will return to its status subordinate to man. Not technocracy is needed, but democracy; management or government or thinking of the masses and for the masses. Any technocrats who believe that they will be able to do the work themselves for democracy will find themselves mistaken.

Technocracy follows democracy and not vice versa. The mind creates the machine and the machine creates leisure. Technocracy or machine government emphasizes the leisure outcome, but forgets that the minds of the masses must be opened, socialized, made creative and democratized. HERMAN J. GREENBERG.

Farmer Should Have Tax Exemption of $3,000 on His Homestead.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Agriculture being the fundamental industry, whatever injures or helps the farmer will likewise influence all industry. The newly elected administration appears to be greatly in favor of an allotment plan of paying a bonus to the farmers. To pay a bonus means higher taxes. The farmer is already taxed higher than any other class.

The tax amendment exempting $3,000 of the assessed valuation of every homestead, if it had carried, would have been of great benefit to every farmer and small home owner.

The farmer is assessed much nearer the actual cash value of what he has than the city dweller, as all his neighbors know the value of his farm and buildings, crops, stock and even the money he has in the bank. E. E. MAINS.

Blood-Curdling Juvenile Broadcasts Work Injury to Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has been my habit, late in the afternoon, to allow my son, 5 years of age, to turn the radio on to juvenile broadcasts. Sonny called me yesterday to come into the parlor and stay with him as he was scared. Of course I did so and listened to a blood-curdling and hair-raising broadcast for a few minutes and then shut the radio off. We put the boy to bed at 8:30, but he could not get to sleep, and when he dozed off at midnight he woke up screaming with fright and did not get into a sound sleep until almost daylight. This is a lesson for me to listen in with my son, as at his age I do not want his nerves unstrung for the rest of his life. Juvenile broadcasts would gather a much larger audience if they were educational as well as interesting, omitting ghosts, fairies and blood-curdling adventures. FRED PARKER.

Painstaking Artistry of Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner in Rendition of Latin.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In these times of quackery, when jazz and crooning hold the field, it is refreshing to meet real artistry. May I venture to point out through the medium of your columns, as a subtle touch, that in the recitation of the "Agnus Dei," which Catherine Parr declaims over the death-bed of Henry VIII, Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner does not use the present-day pronunciation of Latin, but that which was in use in the times of Henry VIII—the sixteenth century. Such thought and research are not common. Evidently Miss Skinner is of the class of Joachim and Viardot-Garcia, who held that artistes are the ministers and not the servants of the public. GEORGE MIDDLETON.

Distasteful Radio Programs Usually Advertise Inferior Products.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As sure as "A man is known by the company he keeps," just so sure is a product judged by the radio features that are used to advertise it.

The firms who are responsible for contaminating the air with the so-called music from a pack of jazz hounds, or the asinine wails of a crooner, are assumed to be marketing a product whose quality is made to fit the taste or likes of that lower stratum of society whose lack of refinement enables the broadcaster to easily satisfy them with musical trash. People of culture have no ears for such distasteful noises, and they develop a prejudice against wares so advertised. A JAZZ HATER.

PRAYER.

Grant us, O Lord, these for our need;
The strength and courage for the deed;
The vision that can see beyond
The joys of which we're all so fond
And for tomorrow work and wait,
Though now is trouble at the gate.

Grant us that humor that can smile
Though care beset us for the while.
Let us not whimper, purple lipped,
That we of pomp and sham are stripped,
But let us play our parts as men
Until success is ours again.

Lord, through the hard days and the long
Let us remember to be strong;
Teach us that calmness which can see
How fleeting pleasure has to be.
Grant us to recognize and know
That sorrows come and sorrows go.

Lord, after anguish and despair
Teach us that follow mornings fair.
Hearten us all our parts to play,
From loss let no man run away,
And in the end grant us to see
Just how much richer we shall be.

Interpreting the Mode

By DARE

THERE are more things around! I never had so much lingerie in my life, honestly—as I have since this famous depression! Why? Because day by day either the French-Maid-I-Fired or Sister Dionne or I-Myself rummaged around and found this or that still quite nice thing—that had been set aside in more affluent days. And found that with a new ribbon or elastic, a washing in soap flakes and a dipping into tinting dye—it was as good as new—and more liked, because of sentimental attachment!

Not only lingeries (pronounced, please, "langeree," or else say "underwear" and be done with it; but don't say "underwear" in French and mispronounce it), but other things—blouses and vestees I had "emerged out of"—with a bit of embonpoint; stockings that had rips in the top and could become ankle socks; nighties that seemed worn out at the top or too this or that, and oh, lots of things!

Not at all least were the bedroom slippers—than which I wear out the whichest in all my things. Well, bedroom slippers can come in for a surprising amount of saving, I found—new inner soles, or the same old ones torn out and re-covered, then glued back in again; 15-cent store beads around the soles, right where the satin joins the soles—to cover worn spots right on the toes; one lovely pair that held its shape well covered with lace right over the worn part; and oh, lots of other things that Clever Fingers can do for herself and the family—hard times and no money for anything notwithstanding.

I've been just bustin' to tell you about this discovery. At last, at last—something to do with that old automobile tire and dem inner tubes that are such a dead loss in the garage! And you would never guess what—such a practical and delightful and muchly needed thing—I couldn't believe my own hunch until I had tried it and worn them!

Oh, this is so good that I am almost tempted to just dare you to send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for this leaflet—sight unseen! But I guess I had better give you a hint—so it's bedroom slippers, play sandals and beach sandals that we tell you how to make from old tires and inner tubes! And, my deahs, chic ones, and wearable ones, and wear-out-less ones, and comfortable ones, and artistic ones. One Saturday daddy can make a set for every one in the family and all the neighbors' kids—and it will cost him nothing but a few tacks and a couple of smashed fingers. Doesn't it sound incredible? But it isn't—and a thriving industry doing just this in China is importing—to China, of course, old automobile tires and tubes for the making of just this very commodity. Better send that stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post right away, because this is going to be one leaflet that there will be a rush on. 'Nif you haven't the time or the inclination to bother with such menial tasks—put the chauffeur to work making 'em. Because the children will simply love them, I'll promise you.

An revoir!

What Today Means

"CAPRICORN."

IF January 7 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 a. m. to 8 a. m., from 2:30 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. and from 6:20 p. m. to 7:50 p. m. The danger hours are from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m. and from 9 p. m. to 9:45 p. m.

Emotional outbursts will seem to be the order of the day; envy, anger, hate, etc., will be motivating forces on this January 7. The seas of matrimony and love will be turbulent. In the business world things in all probability will be very dull. A good day to finish up matters that have been dragging for some time.

The child born on this January 7 will quite probably have a very happy life. Things will come easily to him; he will not have to work terribly hard for what he wants. Susceptible to flattery. From its early years, the little one will be attracted to and will attract those of the opposite sex.

If January 7 is the date of your birth, you have an extremely strong will power. Yours is a strong character. You dominate all those with whom you come in contact; you number among your friends only those whom you can subject to your will. Rightly directed this power of yours will take you far. However, you are all too human and cause a great deal of trouble for yourself as well as for others. You have no fear and face your problems with a determination to bring them to a successful finish and a firm conviction that nothing can occur to prevent this. You have great energy and are an untiring worker. You have the ability to get more work out of your employes than have most employers.

Born on January 7, you are a person who can be trusted greatly. You have a strong sense of loyalty, and you would go to any length to help a friend. When it comes to affairs of the heart, you are a bit "standoffish." You hesitate to give in to any one, and marriage you are afraid would involve certain compromises which you are not sure you would want to make. If you marry, it will no doubt be late in life at an age when you have begun to mellow a bit and to become a little more understanding. You will make a good husband or wife, as the case may be.

How to Be Beautiful

By ELSIE PIERCE

MISS DOROTHY: The tiny red marks on your cheeks which you describe are called "rouge heads."

They may be overcome by faithful night and morning thorough cleansing of the skin and then stimulation to close the open pores. Before retiring at night, first cleanse with a liquifying cleansing cream, removing with tissues. Next, use a wash cloth, warm water and bland soap and work up a good lather. Rinse several times with warm water, then dash with cold water. Dry carefully. In the morning, cleanse with cream and pat with skin tonic. Finish with an ice rub (ice wrapped in gauze or soft cloth).

Vera K.: (1) The "crescent" shape of eyebrow should be becoming to you if your face is long and narrow. Have as much space as possible between the brows and the eyes, plucking the wild hairs from under so that a deep arch appears about the center of the eye. Leave the inner ends quite low close to the nose and if the brow does not extend down near the outer corner, prolong it with an eyebrow pencil. (2) I would not advise you to try dyeing your brows at home. It is difficult for the amateur to get them an even color and they might look very artificial. An operator at a reputable beauty salon in your vicinity would do the work expertly and quickly, and the process is not at all expensive.

* * * *

Marion McM: To determine whether your hair will take a successful permanent wave, I would suggest that you go to a reputable beauty salon which specializes in the modern methods of permanent waving and ask to be given a "test curl" before the wave. This will definitely indicate whether your hair will take a wave without any harm whatever and just how much heat and the length of time is needed. (2) A series of scalp treatments before the wave would be beneficial, vigorous scalp massage every night, night and morning brushing and hot oil treatments before the weekly shampoo.

* * * *

Daily Reader: Careful application of rouge will help to make the round face appear somewhat longer. Place the rouge quite high on the cheek bones, just beneath the eyes. Do not carry the rouge out on the cheeks. Have the deepest color in toward the nose and it should be blended so that it fades away before the widest part of the face.

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

RAW FISH MAY BE DANGEROUS.

IN EVERY part of North America man is more or less troubled by a fair number of parasitic worms. In certain parts of the country persons who swim in ponds acquire what is sometimes known as swimmer's itch. Waders pay even a heavier penalty because the worms that cause this annoying skin eruption are found in greater abundance in the shallower pools. This worm, in a certain stage, bores into the skin, causing an eruption that itches severely. It can be prevented by greasing the skin well with sulphur ointment before entering the water and then using a hyposulphite lotion after coming out.

People who eat fresh water fish raw or insufficiently cooked are prone to infection with fish tapeworm. A few years ago it was supposed that no one had fish tapeworm except those who ate pike and pickerel taken from a few Minnesota lakes; that it was limited to racial groups who followed the custom of eating raw and smoked fish. That may have been true five or ten years ago, but it is not so now. Today one of the most prevalent of the tapeworms is that spread by fish. It is rather widely scattered over America. All races have it.

Infestation with this tapeworm causes anemia. To avoid the trouble no fresh water fish should be eaten unless it is thoroughly cooked.

Not many years ago the pork and beef tapeworms were rather prevalent in America. At the present time they are rather rarely encountered. We are far more cleanly in our handling of meats than we formerly were. These tapeworms do comparatively little harm in man. The methods of prevention are to refrain from eating raw and underdone meats and the exercise of great cleanliness in butchering, marketing and cooking of meats.

Several tapeworms are spread by dogs, cats, rats, and mice. Protection against these consists in the avoidance of the animal hosts, in the exercise of cleanliness, and in thorough cooking of meats.

The most dangerous American worm parasite, so far as man is concerned, is trichina. We became infested with this worm by eating raw, smoked, and underdone hog meat. Scientists of the United States Department of Agriculture have found that infected pork becomes harmless if stored long enough at a temperature that is sufficiently low. However, the wise consumer will refrain from eating any pork that is not well cooked.

Again we pay a price for associating with dogs, cats, rats, and mice. They help to spread this disease.

Hookworm is much less important than it once was, but at that it remains one of the greatest menaces to our racial stock. Infestation causes anemia, malnutrition, and a lack of energy. Among the methods of prevention are wearing shoes, keeping the feet out of mud and water, and cleanliness of the hands and of the food. There are many satisfactory medicines for getting rid of hookworm.

EPILEPSY POSSIBLE.

Mrs. H. R. writes: My 12-year-old cousin has some sickness. She talks to anybody and all of a sudden stops talking. She can't see or hear. She doesn't fall, but stays in one place. This lasts about two minutes and when she gets over it her mother asks her what is wrong. She says it gets dark in front of her eyes and she can not hear. When she is that way her mother tries to talk to her, but she doesn't answer. Her mother tries to touch her; she moves her hands and tries to push her mother away. She has these spells about ten times a day and has been that way since she was 4 years old. She lives in the country.

REPLY.

GRACE BORROUGHS' PORTRAYAL IS VIVID

Symbolism of Each Dance Is Explained in Prelude to Her Program.

Miss Grace Borroughs, interpretive dancer, who appeared in a program of East Indian dances last night at the Willard Hotel, the second in the series of programs under the auspices of the Musical Artists of America, gave a vivid portrayal of the spirituality of the art tradition and folk life of Hindustan.

As a prelude to her program, Miss Borroughs explained the symbolism of each dance, the musical instruments used by her accompanists and the historical significance of her costumes.

There was an authenticity about the artist's work that made it altogether convincing. Her first dance, "Javanese," from an old batik, was beautifully executed. In the "Sudanese" in which gypsy girls riding on camels with saddle bags, their scarves flying in the wind, wove a spell with the music and rhythm produced by the bells on her ankles. The East Indian group, danced by movements of her feet, was an innovation, and won enthusiastic applause from the audience.

Probably the most striking number was the "Lambani of Hoosa Thanda," a picturesque gypsy dance representing the ecstacy of the hopeful bride dancing the dance of courtship and love, followed by her tragic collapse in her wedding costume on hearing of the death of her lover on her marriage day. In the "Winding of the Sari," and "Supplication," Miss Borroughs proved to her audience that the old dances as they have been handed down from the ages have a dignity and charm which the modern dances can not equal. Danced to the accompaniment of drums, these two numbers were perhaps the most impressive on her program.

COLUMBIA

"THE DEATH KISS"—World-Wide Amization of the novel by Madelon St. Denis, featuring David Manners, Adrienne Ames, John Wray, Vince Barnett and Bela Lugosi, with Alexander Carr, Harold Minjir, Alan Roscoe and Edward Van Sloan. Directed by Edwin L. Marin. Reviewed Friday night by M. A. McKavitt.

A Chicago night club was recently the scene of a murder. That's not unusual. It is touched or tainted with the bizarre, however, by the fact that the notorious character killed was one of a string of sweethearts of a moll whose osculatory enterprises always left the favored man shaking hands with that sable-robed joy-killer, Death. That was an example of a "death kiss" in real life.

Although the circumstances of the death kiss in this mystery thriller at the Columbia, strictly speaking, are not realistic, for this particular episode is accomplished during the making of a movie, nevertheless, the consequences are quite as realistic and tragic as those in the overgrown city on Lake Michigan.

In other words, when you see "The Death Kiss" you will be seeing a man actually killed who was not supposed to be killed, in a movie, while you are at a movie. He was a Don Juanesque screen idol, beloved by the women and, of course, "worshiped" by the men. Naturally his sudden demise caused great mourning in the ranks of his feminine admirers (excepted jilted wives) and his horde of masculine fans all got in a telephone booth and sang dirges.

After a long series of amazing deductions by David Manners, a young and handsome scenario writer who is trying to clear the star and former wife of the slain actor of the murder charge, aided by two wise-cracking dicks, the crime is solved. Honors go to Messieurs Manners, Wray, Barnett, Carr, Van Sloan, Mihjir, Roscoe and Boteler. Barbara Bedford, a minor character, was the more animated of the actresses, the other two being Adrienne Ames and Mona Maris. The mysterious-looking Mr. Lugosi has little to do.

A Floyd Hamilton comedy, tepid but amusing, called "Doubling in the Quickies," and the Paramount News, featuring a special release of the late Mr. Coolidge, brought the Columbia screen offering back to the place in the program where we had come in.

PALACE

"A FAREWELL TO ARMS"—Paramount picturization of the novel by Ernest Hemingway, adapted to the screen by Benjamin Glazer and Oliver H. P. Garrett, starring Helen Hayes and Gary Cooper, with Adolphe Menjou, Mary Phillips, Blanche Friderici, Gilbert Emery, Henry Armetta and Fred Malatesta. Directed by Frank Borzage. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

This famous story, in its picturized form, will be more impressive to those who have not read Ernest Hemingway's novel than to those who have.

Much as "Rain" was devitalized by the stripping away of most of its frankness, ruggedness and daring, so has "A Farewell to Arms" been vitiated by a softening of its savage ruthlessness, a tempering of its language and a considerable amelioration of war's horrifying effects upon the lives of men.

Where Mr. Hemingway's book was seldom beautiful, but in its terrifying unity of time, place and action was always chaste, the picture, with its modified spirit and tempo, is almost continuously beautiful, but not so consistently chaste.

Paradoxical as this may sound, it is only another way of saying that circumstances alter cases. The cataclysmic circumstances of Mr. Hemingway's novel were those of war; the less acrid circumstances of the picture are largely those of society's conventional decorum, in which an exaggerated stigma attaches even to minor infractions of the code.

To this extent, and for this reason, the picture lacks the spark of greatness that ignited the pages of the Hemingway book. In the light of the rigid inhibitions imposed upon the screen, this, of course, is inevitable.

Insofar as it is possible, within the bounds of good taste and the screen's exacting code of ethics, "A Farewell to Arms" reflects an honest effort to adhere to the movement of the original narrative, and stands as a splendid artistic achievement. If some of the savor of the book is gone, it will be largely atoned for by the sensitive, tender and thoroughly moving performance of Helen Hayes in the role of Catherine Barclay, the nurse whose love was the seal of a pitiful and a tragic fate.

Only occasionally does Gary Cooper even remotely approach the smoothness, the eloquence and the compelling depth of his stellar associate's portrayal. Fortunately these flashes of warmth and color occur at the moments when they are most needed to save Mr. Cooper from another of his peculiarly uninspired essays at believable characterization. In his simulation of impotent fear and bitter anguish, as the death of the mother of his stillborn son seems imminent, Mr. Cooper manages, somehow, to get well outside himself.

While the romantic love affair between the young nurse and the American lieutenant in the Italian Ambulance Corps on the Italo-Austrian front is kept consistently to the fore, Director Borzage has betrayed an imaginative and effective skill in weaving a panoramic background of the crimson horrors of modern warfare and the enormous folly of armed conflict among nations that one wishes might at least once explode with something approximating Mr. Hemingway's flaming fury.

Adolphe Menjou and Mary Phillips are among those who render Miss Hayes and Mr. Cooper their most valuable support. Menjou, as Maj. Rinaldi, makes the most of opportunities rather less opulent than Mr. Cooper's and Miss Phillips registers with proper acerbity as "Fergy," Catherine's loyal friend and ardent protector.

A mildly amusing ZaSu Pitts-Thelma Todd comedy, "Sneak Easily;" a Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, "Building a Building," and the Metrotone News augment a finely wrought feature for those with the courage to enjoy an unhappy ending—especially if they have not read the book.

EARLE

"THE DEVIL IS DRIVING"—Paramount picturization of a story by Frank Mitchell Dazey and screen play by Louis Weitzenkorn, featuring Edmund Lowe and Wynne Gibson, with Lois Wilson, James Gleason, Dickie Moore, Alan Dinehart, Guinn Williams and Tom Kennedy. Directed by Ben Stoloff. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

This sizzling action-drama has for its locale, through much of its footage, a most remarkable establishment consisting of a large midcity garage, fully equipped to dismantle and disguise stolen motor cars almost before you can say "jack up the back wheels," a gaudy pent house and a gorgeous speakeasy—all under one roof.

Your stole the car wherever you found it, shot it up the winding ramp to the department where they do the quick paint jobs, stepped out through a trick door that looked like a parked automobile from the other side, into the speakeasy, grabbed yourself a jolt of poison and then went on up to the big shot's apartment, where Silver, the moll, usually hung out. There you found the dummy with the evil countenance, whose function seemed to be that of a combined butler, master mind and murderer, presiding over an elaborate network of electric signals, secret telautographs and flickering lights. All very mysterious.

This intricate layout, of course, would have come to exactly nothing, if the garage foreman's brother-in-law hadn't fallen for Big Shot Jenkins' gal, Silver, his little son hadn't been crippled by a wild driver trying to get away with a "hot" car and he himself blackjacked and sent down the ramp to his death in a wild sedan timed to collide with a ten-ton truck. All this dirty work had to be fathomed by some one. So Gabby, the brother-in-law, took on the assignment, with the aid of Silver, and, boy, ain't we got fun!

Edmund Lowe is Gabby, the mechanic who was always on the make, and Wynne Gibson, Silver, the dame who was always in the money. Here is a team of smart crackers whose tongues twist around the vernacular in such manner as to suggest that slangsters, like poets, are born, not made. Jimmy Gleason does fairly well himself, in the role of the foreman, and Lois Wilson and Dickie Moore, as his wife and small son, are practically perfect. This young Master Moore has a few scenes with Eddie Lowe that are gems of rapid crossfire.

Representing the sinister influences in the picture's placid revelations are Alan Dinehart, as Jenkins; Francis McDonald and Charles Williams, the auto thieves, and George Rosener, the dummy.

On the stage, Bernice Claire and Alexander Gray, making their first joint appearance in Washington, score decisively in scenes from "The Desert Song" and "The New Moon," Miss Claire adding "Let's Turn Out the Lights and Go to Sleep," in her brilliant soprano, and Mr. Gray, "Ol' Man River," in his resonant baritone. They are compelled, however, despite the rousing hit they score, to divide show-stopping honors with Jack Pepper and his two familiar stooges in an interval of their typical songs and nonsense.

The first act introduced by Maxine Doyle, the current m. c.—and Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these—was Bernice Store and Matt Gibbons, assisted by the "Four Marvels," in a brief dance interlude, introducing some clever acrobatic work and toe taps by the quartet of young coryphees. Walter Dare Wahl, assisted by Emmett Oldfield—about 60 per cent of the act, if you ask me—complete the bill by repeating their amazing gymnastic stunts, both legitimate and burlesque.

A Mack Sennett comedy, "The Lion and the House," starring Lloyd Hamilton, who, by the way, isn't as funny as the lion, and the Universal News, with Graham McNamee, complete an entertainment that almost had the customers cheering yesterday.

RIALTO

"THEY JUST HAD TO GET MARRIED." Universal picturization of a story by Gladys Lehman and H. M. Walker, featuring "Slim" Summerville and ZaSu Pitts, with Roland Young, Verce Teasdale, Fifi D'Orsay, David Landau, C. Aubrey Smith, Elizabeth Patterson and Henry Armetta. Directed by Edward Ludwig. Previewed Thursday night.

Flavored with a dash of the same sort of humor that pointed "If I Had a Million," tinctured a little with the fun of "The Hottentot" and partaking somewhat of the domestic tang of "One Hour With You," yet not consciously borrowing from any of these, "They Just Had to Get Married" affords an ample and amusing outlet for the elongated drollery of "Slim" Summerville and the plaintive absurdity of ZaSu Pitts.

These two are the pivotal figures currently simulating the various discomfitures experienced by a butler and a parlor maid, suddenly left his entire fortune by a crotchety millionaire, who distrusted his relatives' counterfeit interest in his well being while he lived. Immediately, the relatives become either sychophants of the nouveau riche menials or arch plotters against their domestic peace.

The action thereupon proceeds through a succession of social activities customary with the very rich but new to the newlyweds—formal dinners, riding breakfasts, balls, gay cabarets, &c. Until the trickery of a scheming wife brings catastrophe to all concerned, "Slim" and ZaSu were doing all right. A pair of silk stockings and a telltale shadow on a curtained French window did the work, however, and separation results. "Slim" slips to the low level of waiter in a basement dive, and ZaSu, in an attempt to restore their happiness, only makes matters worse. An Apache dance at this juncture does much to keep the piece from going "dramatic."

There is a vast amount of amusement to be derived from the perplexities of this odd couple during the intervals of their lives immediately following the wedding ceremony, which each nervously tries to reduce to almost complete inefficacy before they are finally joined in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The episodes of the bridal night are skillfully devised agencies of exquisite suspense that constantly threaten to slip over the boundaries of strict propriety, but never do.

In addition to the costars, there are Roland Young, David Landau, Veree Teasdale, Fifi D'Orsay, a little plumper and more subdued than is her wont; C. Aubrey Smith, Elizabeth Patterson and Henry Armetta, to help the fun along—which they emphatically do, although it is doubtful if the Messrs. Young and Smith find their roles any tax upon their ability or resourcefulness.

The principal auxiliary attraction is another of the Rialto's musical reels, in which Art Jarrett is the featured artist, supported by Jacques Renard and his orchestra and a considerable cast. In attempting to devise a radio stunt, Art recounts a Mexican adventure which at once becomes the screen's major story. His voice is shown off to fine advantage, and, unless these eyes are mistaken, Armida is prominent in his support as the little Mexicana, Rosita.

Cartoon comedy and a new issue of the Universal News, with Graham McNamee helping out the cameraman with his running comment on people and events, complete a gay and irresponsible entertainment. N. B. B.

METROPOLITAN

"TWENTY THOUSAND YEARS IN SING SING"—First National picturization of Warden Lewis E. Lawes' book, adapted to the screen by Wilson Mizner and Brown Holmes, featuring Spencer Tracy, Arthur Byron, Bette Davis and Warren Hymer. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing, a rather great man, we believe, wrote a brave, fascinating revealing book. With its wealth of detail, characterization and anecdote, it could not, of course, be literally translated to the screen, but with the condensation of the stories of those myriad frightened, puzzled, belligerent humans serving out the 20,000 years and the building up of a central figure to symbolize many of them, we have in this picture a tremendously moving drama made truly heart-tearing through the depth and absolute rightness of the playing of Arthur Byron, as the warden, and Spencer Tracy, beautifully assisted by Bette Davis.

Yet, somehow, while preserving intact the spirit of the kindly warden's much-stranger-than-fiction truth and of his humanity, the picture, through its more stylized plot, fails to uphold that very honor system which typifies the humanity of Warden Lawes. It is hard to explain, but where so many times that honor system worked and saved men in the warden's story, its only use in the motion picture leads to stark tragedy.

Tom Connors is the central figure of the picture, a "tough guy" built up by newspaper publicity about "color" and "personality." He is shown working his way from solitary to the trust and friendship of the warden and then, we think so wrongly in a picture of faith and achievement, plunged back into the death house for a murder which he did not commit, but which occurred while he was on an unofficial, honor-system parole from prison.

Spencer Tracy is superb as this central figure. The Tracy who startled and won New York with his Killer Mears in "The Last Mile," again finds his very best acting self in a prison play. He is so real that there aren't many words to describe his performance nor enough to praise it. His Connors is unforgettable.

Arthur Bryon, as the warden, might be Warden Lawes himself, so sincerely, so perfectly does he assume the worn, tired but indomitable trust and faith of the role, with his humanity well bolstered by determination, strength and sufficient "hard-boiledness" to be a four-square man.

A newsreel with pictures of the late Calvin Coolidge and a tribute to him just 24 hours after his death, a tiresome Eddie Cantor revival and Ted Husing sportorial of yesteryear complete the bill.

LOEW'S FOX

"EVENINGS FOR SALE"—Paramount picturization of the story by I. A. R. Wylie, featuring Herbert Marshall, Sari Maritza, Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland. Directed by Stuart Walker. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Should you get the idea from the title of this work that it deals with that product of modern civilization, the gigolo, you would be quite correct; but do not let that deter you from seeing "Evenings for Sale," for, strange as it may seem, the obvious is not the point of this cleverly constructed yarn of post-war Vienna.

True it is that Count Frans von Degenthal is forced to become the dancing partner for any gracious lady who has the wherewithal to finance the fling, but the complications arising out of this profession, distasteful as it is, and his affair of the heart with the beautiful daughter of the local leather tycoon are the real mainspring that sets into motion a string of events which once again proves the old saw that the course of true love never runs smoothly.

The situation can well be imagined, but enter one Mrs. Jennie Kent, widow with a paltry $10,000,000, who is out to view the sites (and sights, too) of "The Merry Widow." So enamored is she of Old Vienna that she purchases the count's ancestral castle in status quo antebellum. Just when things seem darkest for the count and the girl friend, due to a mistaken betrothal, Mrs. Kent departs for the United States, deciding that she is more a grandmother than a girl awaiting her "big moment." And thus the story closes.

A better count than Herbert Marshall makes could hardly be imagined, his carriage and manner bespeaking an inborn dignity that transcends the cares of the moment, yet not exactly ignoring the fact that "one must eat," or words to that effect. And, in a highly commendable manner, Sari Maritza plays the charming merchant's daughter, bringing to the part a delightful reading. Charles Ruggles, completely sober throughout the picture, is the count's former orderly, while Mary Boland is the American dowager making the grand tour. George Barbier, Bert Roach and Lucien Littlefield add their talents to the entertaining drama.

As for the stage show—there is Britt Wood. Mr. Wood, you know, is to the lowly harmonica what Paderewski is to the piano, or Kreisler to the violin, and until you hear his "Under the Double Eagle," "My Hero," and other numbers literally too numerous to mention, you just ain't heard nothing yet! A consummate showman is Mr. Wood.

The Great Nicola stages one of the best disappearing acts seen in a long time. Not content with applying his "black magic" to such inanimate materials as handkerchiefs ribbons, and the like, Mr. Nicola takes on his corps of charming young women—and for good measure, a baby elephant—and eventually they all are caused to disappear. But not for long, for somehow (how naive we are!) they all manage to get back for the finale.

Coming from screenland is Lita Grey Chaplin, whose cycle of "lowdown" songs have their lugubriousness further enhanced by her own gown of dull black. It is not until her final bows that a real glimpse is obtained of Mrs. Chaplin's charming personality and disarming smile. The team of Rector and Doreen open the bill, with Miss Doreen doing aerial gymnastics on apparatus held in the teeth of Mr. Rector, who is hanging head down by one foot. Gordon, Reed and King are an acceptable trio of tap and eccentric dancers.

Applauded With Company by Large Audience at National Theater.

Vicente Escudero, Spanish gypsy dancer, presented a program at the National Theater yesterday afternoon, bringing to a large and appreciative audience a rhythmical terpsichorean impression of the rural districts of his native country.

Ably assisted by Carmela and Carmita, both talented dancers in their own right, Escudero generously shared the program of fourteen numbers with them. Luis Mayoral and A. Guro provided good accompaniment, the former on the guitar and the latter at the piano.

The program was extremely well drawn in that each of the large number of dances was briefly and quickly presented, a feature which allowed the presentation of many more dances than otherwise would have been possible, and which kept the audience well entertained with variety.

The artistry of Escudero himself was displayed to best advantage in one number entitled "Rhythms," in which he completely won his audience with his work presented without the aid of any accompanying music.

The most interesting number on the program undoubtedly was "Plaza de Toros," a demonstration of the modern bull fight.

"Alegrias," a haughty type of dance executed by Carmela was this artist's best contribution. Carmita was at her best in a graceful dance entitled "Bolero."

Of the ensemble dances in which Escudero appeared on the stage with his assistants, "A Gypsy Dance of Sacro Monte Granada" was the best.

All in all, the entire colorful program, particularly marked by the beautiful contrast of the great number of costumes worn, was splendidly received. HARRIS B. HULL.

RKO-KEITH'S

"THE ANIMAL KINGDOM"—RKO-Radio picturization of the stage play by Philip Barry, adapted to the screen by Horace Jackson, starring Leslie Howard and Ann Harding, with Myrna Loy, Henry Stephenson, Neil Hamilton, William Gargan, Ilka Chase, Leni Stengel and Donald Dilloway. Directed by E. H. Griffith.

Crisp and scintillant in much of its dialogue, uniquely amusing in more than one of its character creations and played with an easy and wholly disarming naturalness by a cast of distinguished ability, the admirable screen version of Mr. Philip Barry's delightful comedy about to enter its second week at RKO-Keith's has been quickly recognized by the Capital's discriminating theatergoers as one of the smartest and most diverting entertainments of the season.

This, of course, is largely due to the superlatively facile performance of Leslie Howard, in the role of Tom Collier, the young publisher, who abandons a charming young artist with whom he has had relations to marry a supposedly ideal wife who turns out to be just a bit of a scheming shrew. This precipitates a situation which is finally adjusted by means that lend the familiar "triangle" dramatic pattern a new and engaging design.

Although Mr. Howard's is the predominant role and performance, "The Animal Kingdom" is by no means a one-character play. Myrna Loy, as the wife who should have been mistress, contributes a portrayal that marks her high point of achievement to date and slightly overshadows Ann Harding's less ample role of the mistress who should have been wife. Then there are William Gargan, in his original role of the punch-drunk former pugilist-butler, which he created on the stage; Henry Stephenson, congenially cast as the elder Collier; Neil Hamilton, Ilka Chase, Donald Dilloway, Leni Stengel and perhaps one or two others who add appreciably to the splendid balance of a particularly competent ensemble.

The bill is augmented by an insane Clark & McCullough comedy, "Hocus Focus," depicting the trials of a pair of lunatic photographers; a clever cartoon comedy, "Silvery Moon," and a new issue of the Pathe News. N. B. B.

THE PARADINE CASE -- By ROBERT HICHENS

SYNOPSIS.

Sir Malcolm Keane, one of England's most celebrated advocates, has been briefed by Sir Simon Flaquer, solicitor, to defend his client, Mrs. Paradine, against a charge of murdering her husband, Col. Paradine.

While Mrs. Paradine is in Halloway jail awaiting trial, Lord Horfield is appointed judge of the case.

Sir Malcolm and his pretty wife, Gay, who bears a subtle resemblance to Mrs. Paradine, have been happily married for ten years, but the husband's obsession with the Paradine case is beginning to cast a dark shadow over their happiness. Sir Malcolm finds himself fascinated by the mysterious blonde, whom he passionately desires to save. Subconsciously he is not wholly convinced of her innocence, but he declares emphatically to Sir Simon that he believes her innocent. Sir Simon is skeptical about the defense Sir Malcolm has prepared, which is to suggest that the colonel's servant, William Marsh, who had been Paradine's batman in the war, might have had a hand in the murder. Sir Malcolm is afraid of Lord Horfield, who seems to have a streak of cruelty that manifests itself toward women who come up for trial before him.

Col. Paradine had been blinded in the war and had never seen his beautiful wife, who had been a servant before her marriage. She is a Dane, who had been rescued from a life of degradation by a philanthropic American. After a short period in the United States, she had settled in London to earn her living, and had married the rich Col. Paradine after the war.

Sir Malcolm goes alone to the north of England to look over the Paradine home at Hindley. On his return he invites the Horfields to dinner and the theater, against Gay's wishes. The dinner passes off in a friendly enough spirit. Leaving for the theater Keane takes Lady Horfield in his car and Gay accompanies Lord Horfield, who makes love to her, much to her disgust.

SIR JOSEPH FARRELL rose in his seat.

"My lord," he said, turning to the judge, "I object. The learned counsel, instead of letting the witness speak for himself, is deliberately putting words into his mouth."

"My lord," said Keane hotly, "I was merely asking the witness whether Col. Paradine had not expressed a sickness of life to him."

"I beg pardon, my lord. My learned brother told the witness what in his opinion the witness meant. I object to witness being led on in that way."

"I must say," observed Lord Horfield, "that I noticed that the learned counsel was putting words into the witness' mouth, but I was loath to interfere, as I know the learned counsel very easily resents interruption."

"I beg your lordship's pardon," said Keane with heat. "I resent no interruption that is valid; I only object to being interfered with when I am performing my bounden duty to my client within the regulations as to evidence laid down by the law. If your lordship thinks I have transgressed, it is for your lordship to say so."

"My objection stands, my lord," said Sir Joseph Farrell obstinately. "My learned brother was deliberately leading the witness."

"I think," said Lord Horfield, suavely, "that it would be desirable—I will not say more—if the learned counsel for the defense would let the witness speak entirely for himself without putting actual words into his mouth."

"I am quite satisfied with that ruling, my lord," said Sir Joseph, sitting down with a smile of satisfaction.

"William Marsh," said Keane in a loud, hectoring voice as if with the deliberate purpose of provoking and angering the witness, "on your oath do you deny having heard Col. Paradine while in London say that he was sick of life and wished he was dead?"

Sir Joseph Farrell frowned and looked toward the bench, but Lord Horfield made no sign, only smiled jaintly and moved his lips pressed together upward.

"No, sir."

"What do you mean by no, sir?"

"I didn't hear him."

"On your oath did he not say that before you in the presence of his friend, Col. Blake of the Grenadier Guards?"

"I can't call it to mind, sir."

"So that if Col. Blake comes here and swears that it is so you swear the contrary?"

After a pause Marsh said:

"He may have done, sir."

"I ask you did he not say so time and again in your presence and in the presence of Mrs. Paradine when you were all three in the room together?"

"I don't rightly call it to mind, sir."

"So that if I put Col. Blake and Mrs. Paradine in that box and they both testify on oath to Col. Paradine's having said that—that he was sick of life and wished he was dead—in your presence, mind, your denial still stands?"

"The colonel said a lot of things when he was angry about his blindness. I got so accustomed to them that I didn't take much notice."

"Then you do not deny his saying repeatedly that he was sick of his life and wished he was dead?"

"I don't remember it, sir, but he might have done."

"And his lordship and the jury are to take that as your considered answer?"

"He might have done, sir. That is all I can say."

Keane looked at the jury box and raised his shoulders slightly. He put some further questions to the witness about the life in the London house and finally said in a voice that rang through the court:

A long rustle went through the crowd. Marsh braced his tall body up in the witness box and with his right hand grasped his left hand by the wrist.

"He knows now he's for it!" Judith murmured to Gay.

And without knowing that she did it, she breathed a long sigh.

"January the 16th!" said Keane. "Now, on that day how did the colonel seem?"

"Just as usual, sir."

"Was he cheerful?"

"Not specially, sir."

"Was he, on the contrary, very depressed?"

"I think he was rather down, sir."

"Do please tell us frankly how he seemed to you that day?"

"Rather down, sir."

"What did he do on that day, as far as you remember? Take us up to the time when you heard loud voices and the summons to you to come to him."

Marsh slowly related how the colonel's day had passed.

"That will do. And now where were you when you realized that something unusual was taking place in Col. Paradine's study, the room in Eaton square that he used as a study?"

"I had been downstairs, sir, in the servants' hall and had occasion to come up."

"Why did you come up?"

"I can't rightly remember, sir."

"Now, William Marsh, I ask you this. Was it your habit to be about when your master and mistress were together in order to try and hear what they were talking about?"

Marsh flushed with anger and thrust his head forward toward counsel.

"Certainly not, sir." I should be ashamed to spy."

"And yet on that afternoon—or evening—you just happened to be about and can't quite remember why? Is that it?"

"I was stopped by hearing the colonel calling out for me and hearing the bell going."

"And what did you do then?"

"I hurried to the study, sir, and went in."

"Very well!" Keane said mechanically, gnawed by a sickening hesitation and simultaneously driven by a curiosity more urgent than any he had known before in the whole course of his life. "You have told his lordship and the jury what was the cause of the scene that ensued when you got into the room. Do you still adhere to what you said?"

"Yes, sir."

"You are aware that there are very severe penalties for perjury?"

Marsh made no reply.

"I suggest to you," said Keane, speaking slowly, " that you have invented an explanation of what took place in that room."

"No, sir!"

"I suggest to you that what really happened was totally different."

"No, sir!" said Marsh, thrustin, forward his head and speaking with fierce emphasis.

"I suggest to you that the whole of your conduct of what was said by Mrs. Paradine, Col. Paradine, and you was a tissue of lies, designed by you to cover up the truth of what had really happened to cause Col. Paradine's outburst of anger."

"I deny that, sir."

"Very well. We will see as to that in a moment. Remember, there will be another witness as to what really happened."

"He's looked at her at last!" Judith whispered to Gay. "I believe he's afraid of her. I believe Sir Malcolm's put the fear of God into him."

Gay answered nothing. She was gazing at her husband and did not even hear Judith's whisper.

"Do you, William Marsh, expect his lordship and the jury to believe that Mrs. Paradine deliberately invented a cock and bull story about your intending to leave the colonel's service, knowing full well that directly the colonel spoke of it to you you would deny it?"

"Yes, sir, she did."

"You say that again?"

"Yes, sir."

"You have lived for a considerable time with Mrs. Paradine at close quarters?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you consider her a fool?"

"No, indeed, sir!" exclaimed Marsh with a deep breathing outburst.

"Ah! Now then! If she be not a fool why should she invent such a story, not only knowing it to be false but also knowing that directly it was repeated to you by the colonel, you would give her the lie?"

"I—I couldn't say as to that, sir."

"What object could she have?"

"I couldn't say, sir."

"And how could she possibly expect to attain it in such a manner?"

"The colonel might believe her, sir."

"Rather than you?"

Marsh was silent. Perspiration was again visible on his cheeks and his forehead.

"You say she told him you had informed her that you were going to leave his service?"

"Yes, sir."

"After being with him for years and though he depended on you for almost every personal service necessary to a blind man?"

"Yes, sir."

"He asks you in and you deny it?"

"Yes, sir."

"And that the colonel refused to have anything more to do with you, refused to have you in his bedroom to do your usual service to him, refused to let you come near him until he could refuse no longer because he lay there a corpse?"

Silence.

"Answer me! You are here to answer."

"The colonel was in such a state that he wouldn't listen."

"If he were in such a state, and what you assert is true, then he thought that his wife was a truth teller and that you were a liar? Is that what you tell the jury?"

"No, sir."

"Explain yourself, Col. Paradine is alone with his wife. She tells him something about you which puts him into a rage. He calls you in to hear your version. You tell him that what has been told to him about you is totally false. And on that he continues to be in such a fury that he won't listen to a word you say and never has anything more to do with you. And yet you persist in saying that he believed your word, trusted you and did not think you a liar! Do you say that?"

Marsh was silent. His face was now damp with perspiration, even his big hands were damp.

After waiting for a time that seemed very long, Keane said:

"Do you really expect the jury to believe that?"

"The colonel wouldn't listen to me, sir," Marsh then said in a low, dogged voice.

"Then he believed his wife and he didn't believe you?"

"I never said I wanted to leave him, sir."

"And if I put Mrs. Paradine into the box to tell the jury that she never said you did—what then?"

Marsh half turned his head and looked at the prisoner. People in the court, including the judge, noticed that she took no notice of him. For an instant it was as if he was silently putting a question to her to which she returned no answer.

"I can't help what any one else says!" then muttered Marsh.

"Speak up, please!" said Keane in a loud voice. "What was that you said?"

"I can't help what others say!" almost shouted Marsh, turning with sudden ferocity on counsel.

"Please recollect that you are in a court of justice!" said Lord Horfield.

"I'm trying, my lord, but he goads me to it!" exclaimed Marsh.

And he lifted a hand which shook

"I am here to get the truth from you," said Keane in a ruthless voice. "I suggest to you that all you have told us about that scene between you, the colonel and Mrs. Paradine is a tissue of lies."

"No!"

"I suggest to you that what really happened was quite different."

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

THE "chain store" system which the St. Louis Cardinals have found very profitable in baseball, and which Bill Tilden is planning to extend to tennis, is being introduced into the prize ring industry by Jack Sharkey.

Stock in the Sharkey enterprises boomed last night when Ernie Schaaf knocked out Stanley Poreda, ranked No. 4 among the heavyweights, in sixth round of a battle that was so one-sided it was stopped. For Schaaf, be it known is Chain Store No. 2 of the Sharkey Enterprises. Sharkey owns no inconsiderable "piece" of Schaaf, his fellow Bostonian.

The Poreda incident qualifies Schaaf for a shot at Primo Carnera and if he scales the peak of the Italian Man Mountain it would seem that a Schaaf-Sharkey bout would follow. In which case we would see the employer in the ring with employe for the first time in heavyweight championship history. Should a Sharkey-Schaaf match be announced it will be the signal for even the most gullible of the fans to stay away in great droves.

Class Divided Into Camps.

Heavyweight boxing, unlike Gaul, is apparently divided into only two parts. There is now the Sharkey camp and the Schmeling camp. With Schmeling having incurred the wrath of Madison Square Garden officials by refusing to sign for a bout with Sharkey, the German and his camp followers are no longer welcome in the house that Rickard built.

The Garden's heavyweight dealings, therefore, must be confined to Sharkey, Schaaf, Carnera and any lesser lights who may develop into attractions under the Garden banner. Schmeling has as his chief counter attraction Max Baer, whom he will meet in June, Jack Dempsey who will be seen only in a promotorial role, and possibly King Levinsky, who is leaning toward the Schmeling camp.

The Fight by Rounds.

The blow-by-blow description of a Sharkey-Schaaf bout may well read like this: The fighters advance from their corners at the opening bell clutching statements of last year's business in their respective mitts. Schaaf leads with the auditor's report that the firm would do more business if Schaaf takes over the title. Sharkey counters with a deposition signed by two notaries to the effect that he is still the best drawing card and it would be to the best interests of the company that he retain the crown. They are exchanging statistics at the bell.

Second round—The blood is flowing freely from Schaaf, but on closer inspection it is revealed as only red ink. After two certified accountants work feverishly over him, Schaaf advances to the center of the ring and is met by a fresh attack of Sharkey figures that daze him. His auditing department throws in the towel and the fan files from the arena.

Schaaf Stops Poreda in 6 Rounds

Batters Jersey Boxer to Floor 4 Times Before 7,000.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Once more the blond tiger of old, burly Ernie Schaaf, Boston sailor heavyweight, battered young Stanley Poreda into a technical knockout defeat in six savage rounds tonight before 7,000 fans. Poreda was floored four times before Referee Arthur Donovan stopped the duel.

Apparently completely recovered from the slump that all but carried him out of the top-flight heavyweight picture, the bull-chested Nordic stable mate of Champion Jack Sharkey battered the young Jerseyman to the floor twice in the second round, again in the fourth, and once more before Referee Donovan called a halt after 28 seconds of the sixth. Schaaf weighed 209¼ pounds; Poreda, 203.

Schaaf Avenges Defeat.

Avenging a 10-round decision Poreda, a clever 23-year-old youngster, scored over him last summer. Schaaf, after a madhouse first round, never left the issue in doubt.

He hurled himself upon the big, black-thatched Jerseyman at the opening bell, punched him into a corner and then ran into a succession of straight rights and right uppercuts that left him dizzy at the bell.

But the sailor, now an outstanding contender for Sharkey's title, despite the champion's part ownership of his fistic rights, came back viciously in the second.

He caught Poreda flush on the chin, all of his 209 pounds riding on the punch as he charged in and let it

Thornhill Succeeds Warner at Stanford

Stanford University, Calif., Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Stanford University's football fortunes today were virtually in the hands of Claude Earl ("Tiny") Thornhill, protege of Glenn S. (Pop) Warner, as a result of a recommendation made by the board of athletic control.

His appointment to succeed Warner as head coach awaits approval of Dr. Robert E. Swain, acting president of the university, and the university's board of trustees. This approval is generally considered a formality. Warner resigned to become football coach at Temple.

The athletic board last night also recommended Ernie Nevers, former Stanford full back and an aid to Warner in 1932, as Thornhill's chief assistant.

G. U. DEFEATS COLGATE, 29 TO 26

Murphy, Carolan Lead Hilltop Attack in N. Y. Contest.

Special to The Washington Post.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Colgate's basket ball team fell before a smarter Georgetown U. quintet here tonight, 29 to 26, when the visitors came through with a rally in the last five minutes of play that netted them the victory. It was Colgate's third loss in four games.

Fighting every step of the way the Hoyas gave everything they had in that last-half rally after they had gone into the final stanza three points behind. The visiting forwards were watched very closely, so it remained for Murphy and Carolan, guards to take the scoring honors. It was Carolan's four field goals in the last half that really won the game for Georgetown.

The contest was close throughout with the lead changing hands five times. Both defenses were strong, but the invaders' attack was more consistent and in the end it brought victory. Connors was a tower of strength at center and Crowley broke up many plays. Ed Hargaden, of Syracuse, was held to one field goal and five fouls by Johnny Walsh, local boy, who led Colgate's scorers.

Murphy Ties Score With Goal.

Whitey Anderson started the scoring in the first minute of play with a field goal under the basket, but Murphy tied it up soon after with a short shot. Then double-deckers by Winnie Anderson and Capt. Acropolis gave Colgate a 4-point lead. However, Murphy came to the rescue and sank 4 points to tie it up, and Hargaden put Georgetown ahead with a foul, but Colgate went ahead, 8 to 7, on Brooks' field goal. Then Hargaden got his eye adjusted and his field goal and two fouls gave his team an 11-to-8 lead, but Walsh's field goal and Anderson's field goal tied it up again. Then Walsh and Cook sank two pointers and Hargaden sank a foul as the half ended with Colgate ahead, 15 to 12.

Georgetown started the last half with a rush and it was not long before Connors had dropped in two double-deckers and Carolan had made one, to give the visitors a 3-point advantage. However, Colgate tied the score soon after. Then, with the score at 18 to 18, Crowley came through with a field goal and a foul, and the visitors once again were ahead. Then Hank Kowal entered the game and soon collected 3 points to tie the score at 23 to 23, with five minutes to go. Then Carolan made a field goal, Crowley shot a foul and Carolan added another 2-pointer to make it 28 to 23. Colgate, fighting desperately, got one point on Laflamme's foul and two more on Brooks' field goal, but Hargaden's foul was the end of the scoring.

Cubs Give Jakie May Unconditional Release

Chicago, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Jakie May, veteran southpaw pitcher, today was given his unconditional release by the Chicago Cubs.

May broke into professional baseball in 1914 with the Newman club of the Georgia-Alabama league and ultimately served with three National League cubs, the St. Louis Cardinals, the Cincinnati Reds and the Cubs. He came to the Cubs in 1931 and was used mostly as a relief pitcher. May is in his 35th year.

Tilden Plans 'Chain-Store' Tennis

To Retire From Play and Set Up Courts, Install Coaches.

Says Depression Has Opened Door for Cheaper Tennis.

By JACK CUDDY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6 (U.P.).—"Chain-store" tennis is the next step in the evolution of the racquet game, William T. Tilden 2d said today as he announced formally his intention to retire from competition to enter this new field.

Dangling his long legs from the hotel bed, this tall, gaunt chap who was probably the world's greatest player, explained he would withdraw permanently from the competitive game late this year because "I feel it's rather useless to continue playing after 40." He'll be 40 next month.

Big Bill, seven-times national amateur champion and present outstanding American professional, pointed out the depression had "opened the door" for this long-needed innovation of chain-store tennis. The depression had reduced incomes of country club members throughout the Nation, he said.

Can Not Afford Country Clubs.

"People who have enjoyed the facilities of country clubs, but who now are unable to afford them, need tennis plants which are a cross between public courts and exclusive clubs," he continued. "And then there's that great body of moderately well to do people who haven't been able to join country clubs, who'll find the new plants within their means."

His plan, he said, was to promote a chain of these plants, probably combining outdoor and indoor courts. They will provide social facilities for members and at the same time serve as schools for developing properly younger players.

"My chain will have a group of specially chosen coaches," he said. "Each coach will be grounded thoroughly in my system of tennis, which I naturally believe is the best. Thus, throughout the entire system there will be a correct and uniform method of instruction. This will be a great improvement upon the present haphazard methods of coaching, which often ruin promising players."

Undecided on Locations.

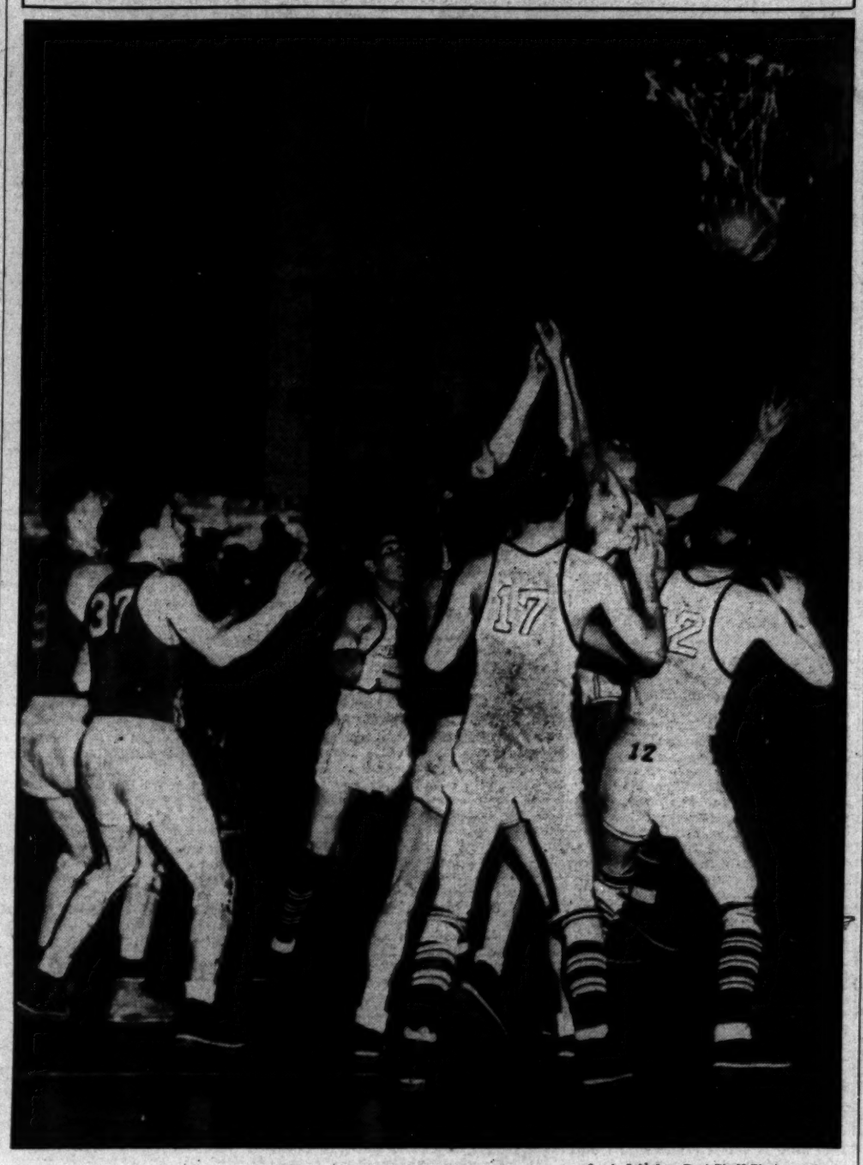
Tilden admitted he hadn't decided yet on the definite locations for his courts or how many there would be in the chain. "There's plenty of time for that later. I'll work out those details during my exhibition tours this year."

He will play in the United States until June 15, then he and a couple of other professionals will go to Europe for competition there. When he returns he'll play a few more matches in America and then hang up his racquet, preparatory to embarking as a promoter.

Glancing back over 22 years of big-time tennis, the Philadelpha master said he considered Henri Cochet, of France, the most brilliant player he ever had encountered. "That's when Cochet was playing in best form," he added. "Sometimes Cochet's tennis is terrible. He's a variable player."

He tagged Hans Nusslein, German professional, as the most consistently good player he ever had known, and said Old Bill Johnston was probably the most "spirited competitor" he had played against.

Action Typical of Central's Victory Over Eastern



Louis Johrden, Post Staff Photographer.

Eastern Is No Match for Clever Shooting of Central.

By LEWIS F. ATCHISON.

ANY doubts of Central's ability, which may have been lurking in the minds of sports fans, were dispelled yesterday at Tech High School, where the Blue defeated Eastern in one of the two games that served to open the 1933 scholastic title chase. The final score of 51-29 surprised even the most optimistic Central supporter. Mild as the game was, even less interesting was Roosevelt's 49-21 defeat of Western in the opening tilt.

Prepared for a typical Eastern-Central game with all the trimmings, a crowd of 2,000 sat throughout the fray and watched in amazement as the nifty-looking lads from Mount Pleasant sent the mechanical scoreboard whirling dizzily upward. It was Central's thirteenth consecutive victory and ran its point score for the season to 663, or an average of exactly 51 per game.

Roosevelt Team Starts Slowly.

Playing without its former members, Ollie Tipton and Carroll Shore, who were to appear later in the Central line-up, Roosevelt was off to a slow start against Western, but near the end of the first half and in the third period the Bears came through with the brand of ball they are capable of playing. Western, as a result, quickly faded from the picture and was hopelessly out of the running as the final period opened.

Huck Cavanaugh, Shorty Harris and Joe Sherman led Roosevelt to victory. A trio of clever floormen, tricky passers and accurate marksmen, they rarely missed a scoring opportunity. Near the end of the game Roosevelt was scoring almost at will.

Brennan, center, and MacPherson, guard, were the steadiest of the entire Western line-up and their stellar work saved the team from losing by a much larger score. The Georgetowners looked too green and inexperienced for the orange-clad quintet hailing from Washington's newest high school.

Though Central's decisive victory over its persistent rival from the banks of the Eastern Branch caused

Landis Voluntarily Takes Salary Cut

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 6.—Baseball reporters and editorial writers on sports sheets have been criticising Commissioner K. M. Landis during the last few weeks because he did not slash his $65,000 salary at the recent meeting of the major leagues.

The fact is that Commissioner Landis has taken a big salary reduction. It was not less than $15,000, and probably was closer to $25,000.

Landis left for Philadelphia early today. He may not admit that he voluntarily cut his own pay check, but he will not deny it.

NOTIFY WINS FIRST JUVENILE RACE OF 1933 AT JEFFERSON

Filly by Noah First Home By Nose.

Monocle Comes From Last to Score in First Race.

JEFFERSON PARK, New Orleans, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The first batch of baby juveniles to go on exhibition at the Shrewsbury course performed in the quarter mile dash down the straightaway here this afternoon and the event provided a flock of thrills. Notify, a typical daughter of Noah out of Polyamia, carried the colors of the well-known breeder P. T. Chinn to a flashy nose victory in 0:23 flat, shattering the mark created last year by Justice Logan by two-fifths of a second.

Notify, paying $10.80, ran straight and true. General Pulaski was a game second, beating Race Street by a head for the place.

Green Field Clashes At Start.

The race was considerably marred by the greenness of many in the twelve-horse field. The start was good, but nearly all the outside horses clashed and were bumped practically out of it. Race Street swerved right out, but Notify and General Pulaski kept their places. This trio dominated the running, with Notify overtaking General Pulaski in the final furlong. Race Street closed fast and was wearing down the leaders.

A feature of the race was the appearance of a gelding named Hard Boiled, which finished fourth. He carried the colors of Mrs. R. M. Hoots, the first to represent that sportswoman since the famous Black Gold. Hard Boiled is one of the first crop of Beggar Boy, a full brother to Black Gold, which was by Black Toney—Useeit.

AT THE POST

with Bill Bennings

DEAR AL: JEFFERSON PARK, JANUARY 6.

Well, friend, I'm batting 1.000 in one league. I mean the brand new 2-year-old circuit. The 1933 babies danced all over the track today as they went to the 2-furlong chute for their initial test of the season. And when they had had their first official romp, the winner turned up in Notify at a $10.80 mutuel and with the Bennings stamp of approval. This youngster was sandwiched between Monocle and Barney Sexton to make it three winners for the day. I cashed, surrounded a half-dozen raw and a half-dozen fried and retired to my palatial quarters where I went into a half-dozen trances. Maybe I can get a half-dozen winners, more or less. BILL.

FIRST RACE—RIFF RAFF narrowly missed brackets the last time and seems well placed here. DR. SYNTAX would prefer an off track and may get it. This fellow packs a punch in the stretch and can make it hot for the top one. BILL ORANGE among the also-eligibles, is dangerous if he goes.

SECOND RACE—DOLLAR PRINCESS won impressively the other day and the same effort repeated here may earn the slab of bacon. PREMEDITATE gets in lightly and may profit by that No. 1 post position. INFANEH to show.

THIRD RACE—VON SION seems well suited in this sprint. Worked well early in the week and may show the boys a turn of real speed tomorrow. WARS END and ROYAL TREASURER to battle it out for the lesser awards.

FOURTH RACE—MAKING BUBBLES can make the grade even with 119 pounds, I do believe. In good form and rarin' for a sprint of this kind. ANNE L. drops a pack of weight and may do the No. 2 honors. LA SALLE to show.

FIFTH RACE—SANDWRACK has a way of popping up in company of this sort after beating a cheaper grade. Has all his speed and gets weight from the principal contenders. ZENKA and WHIPPERCRACKER are assigned to the other money positions.

SIXTH RACE—This may be a spot for SALLY IRENE. I understand she's ready to win and gets a shift of 16 pounds from DONATE, the one I believe she'll have to beat. TARPON to take care of the others.

SEVENTH RACE—IMELDA appears outclassed among these, but I could hardly wait to get this one on my list. I expect a lot of serious running and a set of brackets. NEWGRO and THISTLE FYRN for the rest.

Londos Tackles Judson Thursday

James Londos, wrestling champion, meets Frank Judson, latest local hero, next Thursday night at the Washington Auditorium. Judson has been boosted into fame in the last month, beating Rudy Dusek twice and holding Ray Steele, the best American wrestler, to a 2-hour draw.

Londos has won so many consecutive rassling matches that only Al Munro Elias can compute them. Promoter Turner announced yesterday that he had had trouble in signing Londos to wrestle Judson. Jim originally asked for $3,000, but Mr. Turner pointed out the error of his ways.

SOCCER FANS OFFERED 6 GAMES

Teams Resume Play on Sunday in Both Local Leagues.

SOCCER fans who have been deprived of their Sunday afternoon league games will come back into their own tomorrow when six games will be played in the two leagues, Capital City and Recreation. The holidays and inclement weather caused several weeks of postponements.

Capital City League games will be as follows: Columbia Heights Grays vs. Marlboro, at Marlboro; Gaithersburg vs. Brandywine, at Brandywine; Columbia Heights Blacks vs. Concord, at Silver Spring. Rockville will idle.

The Heights Grays are leading the Capital City League at present by several points, but this lead is discounted when it is realized that Marlboro, its leading contender for the top honors, has played but few games.

Recreation League games are scheduled as follows: Raymond vs. Bloomingdale, Monument, No. 2, at 2:30 o'clock; Park View vs. Rosedale, at Rosedale, at 1 o'clock, and Dux A. C. vs. New York Avenue, Monument, No. 1, at 2:30 o'clock.

At present Virginia avenue is leading by the narrow margin of 1 point, and since it draws a bye tomorrow either Park View or Rosedale will be riding in the top niche on Monday morning, as both of the latter have 11 points to the present leaders' 12.

Donoghue to Coach G. U. Freshman Five

Bernie Donoghue, quarter back with Georgetown University's football team last season, was appointed coach of the Hoya freshman basket ball team yesterday. Donoghue, who comes from Auburn, N. Y., is a senior in law school and has had three year's experience with football and basket ball.

Known as a student of the court game, if not a very active player, Donoghue finds himself with a small squad on hand in which are numbered several former local high school players in Johnny Breen, formerly of St. John's; "Sis" Eisenstad, formerly of Business, and Happy Jacob, formerly of Western.

a decline in the usual number of thrills, the spectators gazed in rapt attention at what many hail as the greatest high school combination Washington has ever produced in action.

Central opened with a rush and little more than a minute elapsed before the eventual winners had 5 points. They made 8 before Al Waters came through with a long looper for Eastern's first score.

Buddy Nau, a good passer in last season's series, but mediocre in other respects, thrilled the crowd with sidecourt shots that swished through straight as an arrow. But there were five Naus playing for Central, or so it seemed. Every man represented a threat to Eastern's hopes, and when the Light Blue would concentrate its defense on one pair, another would continue the highly effective bombardment.

Waters and Nolan Lead Eastern.

Central's lead at the end of the first quarter was 15-6, and it stretched this advantage to 29-12 before the first half had ticked away. Waters and Nolan were the only Easterners to find the hoop consistently. Eight of the points made by the team in the first half were made by the former. Waters totaled thirteen for the afternoon and Nolan eight.

Eastern found itself confronted with a team of ball hawks with an uncanny ability to diagnose its style of play. Central players looked like shadows of their respective opponents, so close was their guarding.

Play was held up momentarily midway in the final period when a young gentleman about 4 years old and 2 feet high nonchalantly strolled across the court at the height of an exciting scrimmage. Up to the press bench he strode and in a loud, squeaky tone demanded to know:

A piece of candy satisfied all demands.

SWIM MEET ATTRACTS VA. CLUB

Richmond Quartet to Compete Tonight at Shoreham.

THE Virginia Swimming Club, of Richmond, yesterday entered a mixed team of natators in the Shoreham pool's water regatta which will be staged tonight, beginning at 8:30 o'clock, with the Olympic diving champion, Georgia Coleman, as the featured star.

The Richmond outfit is composed of Roberta Mercer, Bernice Dodd, Gordon Mallonee and Louis Patterson. Other teams entered are the Ambassador Club, Central High and Shoreham Swimming Club.

While most of tonight's interest centers around the appearance of Georgia Coleman, and her repertory of difficult and perfectly executed dives, the competitive end of the meeting promises to bring out some of the most spirited tank work in months. Particularly keen should be the competition in the diving events, with Marie Duvall, Onalene Lawrence Lois Bates and other topnotchers all entered.

Special Events For Juniors.

A special list of events will be run off for junior boys, while the customary tests will make up the senior meeting. The 75-yard medley race, in which contestants swim one length of the pool with the backstroke, one length with the breaststroke and one length free style, should prove the feature of the racing. Men's diving will bring out two of the best in Washington in John Broaddus and Norman Smith.

The meet is being run under the auspices of the District A. A. U.

Maryland Cubs Open Season With Victory

Maryland University's Freshman basket ball team succeded where the varsity failed when it opened its season with a victory yesterday, defeating the Wilson Teacher's quintet, 28 to 20, at College Park.

The Freshman trailed the Teachers 16-14, at half, but presented a clever defense in the second half which held the Wilson quintet to two lone field goals, both by Fox. Fred Scheele, former St. John's star and Victor Lewis of Delaware, led the attack for the Freshmen with a combined total of 18 points. "Bones" Courtney, former Eastern High star, kept Wilson in the running with 8 points.

YESTERDAY'S ANSWER.

Radio Dial Flashes

By ROBERT D. HEINL

BECAUSE of eleventh-hour arrangements which may be made for broadcasting events in connection with the funeral of former President Coolidge, all program schedules for this morning and afternoon are subject to change without notice.

Bishop Freeman, an old friend of Mr. Coolidge, paid a touching tribute to the former President in the memorial broadcast from the Washington Cathedral yesterday noon. Possibly never before has the fine choir, under the direction of Edgar Priest, been heard more effectively.

It was too bad, however, that the broadcast could not have been held off until later, so that there would have been time to notify listeners. On this account, doubtless, thousands throughout the United States, desirous of hearing the service, missed it.

TWO outstanding musical events claim the attention of listeners today. The first of these is the world premiere of Louis Gruenberg's two-act opera, "The Emperor Jones," by the Metropolitan Opera Company, with Lawrence Tibbett in the title role, which will be heard in its entirety over a coast-to-coast network, including WRC, at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The Gruenberg version of "The Emperor Jones" closely follows the play by Eugene O'Neill, of the former Pullman porter who made himself ruler of a Negro tribe in the jungle and was driven to suicide when the tribe rose in revolt against his cruelty.

Supporting Tibbett in the cast are Marek Windheim, tenor; Pearl Besuner, soprano, and Hemsley Winfield, basso. Tullio Serafin will conduct.

The third of the Saturday evening concerts by the Philadelphia Orchestra, conducted by Leopold Stokowski, will be given over to selections chosen this year by a popular ballot of the Philadelphia music public. They are the Cesar Franck "Symphony in D Minor" and Brahms' "Symphony No. 1 in C Minor." Stokowski will personally introduce the numbers before their performance. Both symphonies will be performed in their entirety (WJSV, 8:15 to 10 p. m.).

SPEAKING of "Emperor Jones" brings to mind the fact that Capt. John Houston Craig, of the Marine Corps, former Washington correspondent, has written a book about Haiti, soon to be published, titled "Black Bagdad." Capt. Craig was for four years an officer in the Haitian Constabulary.

Craig was formerly in charge of the broadcasting at Station HHK, in Port au Prince. This detail came to him through the fact that he had taken an electrical engineering course at the University of Pennsylvania. Once Capt. Craig got the station on its feet—because he was proficient in French as well as in English—he acted as announcer at HHK, where broadcasts are sent out in both languages.

The voice of Capt. Craig was frequently heard in the United States while he was on duty in Haiti, HHK being a 5,000-watt station.

A concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Serge Koussevitzky conducting, will be broadcast over the WJZ network, from Symphony Hall, Boston, at 8:15 o'clock tonight.

The Pickens Sisters are one of the few acts in radio to carry a "spare." There are four sisters, but Patti, Helen and Jane constitute the official group. Grace Pickens, their sister, who is a writer as well as a singer, can duplicate the harmony parts of each member of the trio, and rehearses with them several times each week, so, in the event of an emergency, she can step into the program.

THE Rock Creek Sunshine Girl will sing "Please," "I May Never Pass Your Way Again" and "I'll Be the Meanest Gal in Town" during her program over WRC at 7 o'clock tonight.

Manuel Roxas, speaker of the house of representatives of the Philippine Legislature, will be interviewed by Frederic William Wile on the subject of Philippine independence over WJSV at 10:15 o'clock tonight.

During the months of January, February and March, Station CMCY, Havana, will broadcast a special program of Cuban music from 1 to 2 a. m. each Sunday morning. The station operates on 1,325 kilocycles, with 1,000 watts power. This is approximately the position on the dial of WSAI, Cincinnati, but will probably be hard for us to hear in the United States because so many other stations are assigned to about the same frequency.

MARGUERITE CROMWELL and Rudolf Schramm's orchestra will present the following program during the Wilkins Quarter Hour (WRC, 6:30 p. m.):

"Why Don't You Take Me?" "A Boy and a Girl Were Dancing" and "Don't Hang Your Dreams on a Rainbow," orchestra; "I'll Never Have to Dream Again" and a medley of popular songs, Marguerite Cromwell.

The annual dinner of the Sojourners' Club, a Masonic organization whose membership is made up entirely of Army and Navy Men, will be broadcast over the WJZ network from the Mayflower Hotel at 10:30 o'clock tonight.

ARTHUR GODFREY will be master of ceremonies on a new program—Success Hits of the Day—sponsored by Grosner, Inc., at 5:45 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The feature will be heard weekly, the same day and hour hereafter.

Culbertson on Bridge

By ELY CULBERTSON

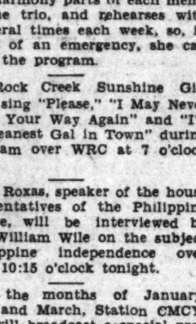
552.

THE DOUBLE-CROSS.

WHEN one has double-crossed someone in business or in some similar field, one's actions are usually considered quite reprehensible. However, if you have successfully double-crossed one of your opponents at the Bridge table, you have sufficient reason to feel quite proud, for, instead of being punished, you probably will be rewarded if by nothing else than a large figure on the score sheet. Double-crossing at the Bridge table is a simple matter. A synonym for the word "double-cross" is "outguess." Just keep one jump ahead of the next fellow.

An example of "the big double-cross number" is seen on the hand below, where a leading expert outguessed another leading expert in a recent Duplicate game.

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The Bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
4◇ (1)	Pass	4♡	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—This bid was the key to the whole situation. South knew West, who would be the Opening leader against any final spade declaration, to be an astute player. South decided that, with any slight additional encouragement from his partner, he would play the hand at a Slam, figuring it to be, at the worst, dependent on one of two finesses. However, South realized that it would make the fulfillment of his contract much simpler if his Ace-Queen of diamonds was led up to. Knowing West to be up on all the latest tricks and wiles of the good player, South was sure that he knew that one of the more popular schemes being used was to bid a worthless suit with the hope of stopping an Opening lead in that suit, and, having prevented this lead, now discard the losers on some side suit.

Knowing West would be on the lookout for a deceptive bid of this sort, South very brilliantly decided to do the unusual and bid the suit he actually wanted led. Therefore, the four diamond bid. Of course, when North responded with four hearts, it was not even close to South that he would bid for the Slam, which he proceeded to do on the next round.

West went into a long huddle before making his Opening lead. "Why," he thought to himself, "is South bidding diamonds at this stage of the game when he and his partner have already decided upon spades as their best suit? I think I understand. He is a little bit worried that we may be able to take too many tricks to enable him to make his contract of six; therefore, there is a very good chance that my partner may have either the Queen or the Ace of diamonds"—and forthwith a low diamond was opened. Even a hurried glance at the hands in question will show that this was the only way that South could fulfill his Slam contract.

Stocks Continue Advances Under Rail Issues' Lead

Eight-Tenths Gain Added as Sales Mount to 1,141,810 Shares.

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—Railroad stocks came forward as the new leaders for a rise today and the shortened trading week closed with rather substantial price appreciation to its credit.

Wall street suspends operations tomorrow out of respect to Calvin Coolidge, hence today's transactions on the stock exchange were doubtless influenced by factors that usually are reserved for a Saturday.

Net gains generally ranged from fractions to something less than 2 points, with carrier equities showing to best advantage. Wheat's strength reflected speculative purchases by traders who had an ear for price-fixing talk in Washington, and doubtless the rise in this staple reacted favorably on the share market.

Just why railroad securities assumed prominence was not immediately apparent. The national transportation committee is believed to have virtually completed its fact-finding task, and compilation of the final report is expected to go forward. It will undoubtedly reflect in due measure the views of Mr. Coolidge.

Several of the active rail shares, including New York Central, Pennsylvania, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific and Lackawanna, were up at least a point. A number of railroad bonds rallied much more extensively.

Industrial stocks were somewhat less aggressive and encountered a little profit-taking toward the close, but net gains of one-half to more than a point appeared for Corn Products, American Tobacco "B," Kennecott, Case, Harvester, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical and American Can. In the same range fell American Telephone, Consolidated Gas of New York, North American and Western Union. Sales totaled 1,141,810 shares.

The reported proposal of Democratic leaders to offer increased income taxes on a broader base as a step toward balancing the budget appeared to have received a cool reception and Washington advices indicated that some members of Congress thought all other sources of revenue should be well canvassed before such a proposal was formally made. Many in and out of Wall street would like to see even a heavier cut in Government expenses than has yet been suggested.

Recent maneuvers in the foreign exchange market, at the expense of the dollar, were only a memory, for European currencies again eased. It was reported that some foreign buying orders had again been placed for our securities.

Surveys of the business landscape in the weekly mercantile reviews disclosed a few patches of sunshine, notably a postholiday pickup. Dun's gathered the impression that moderate progress might be witnessed this quarter, while Bradstreet's said "business seems to be relieved that 1932 has become history," and noted a general feeling that last year has seen "the worst phase of the battle against economic adversity."

May contracts, which opened at .80 sold off to .79, while July declined from .84 to .82. Prices at midday were 1 to 3 points net lower, with distant positions showing the maximum declines.

BONDS RALLY AGAIN ON HEAVIER DEALING

Seven-Tenths Gain Recorded as Turnover Rises to $13,038,000.

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The bond market put another foot forward today in the most active trading in the past ten days.

Sales totaled $13,038,000, par value, and the Associated Press-Standard Statistics average for 60 domestic corporate loans advanced .7 of a point.

While highest grade investment issues generally held around their best levels for the past year, semispeculative liens, led by the rails, took on a new lease of life in the latter part of the session and sprang forward for gains of 1 to 6 or more points.

Most United States Government securities rallied to around their 1932 peaks after announcement that the Federal Reserve System would continue its open market policy. The system's holdings of Federal obligations now approximate $1,851,000,000. Prospects that strenuous efforts would be made to balance the national budget, now showing a huge deficit, cheered the financial district.

The sharp recovery of carrier liens, both prime and secondary, was attributed more to renewed hope than to any actual improvement in transportation conditions. The principal rail gainers included bonds of Santa Fe, Alleghany Corporation, Baltimore & Ohio, Atlantic Coast Line, Boston & Maine, Canadian Pacific, Burlington, St. Paul, Rock Island, Delaware & Hudson, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, Illinois Central, Louisville & Nashville, Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Pennsylvania, St. Louis Southwestern, Southern Pacific, Southern, Texas & Pacific and Wabash.

Among the best of the utilities and industrials were issues of American Telephone, American & Foreign Power, American Metal, Brooklyn Edison, Columbia Gas, Detroit Edison, International Telephone, Pennsylvania Power, Portland General Electric, Postal Telegraph, Western Union, Utilities Power & Light and most of the oils. Armour & Co. 4½s and Paramount Publix 5½s were under pressure for losses of more than a point each.

There were several late recoveries in the foreign list, principally among loans of Germany, Norway, Peru, Colombia, Rio Grande do Sul and Sao Paulo. The Argentines were heavy and British, French and Japanese bonds eased.

Stock Exchange Takes Step To Turn Light on Earnings

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The New York Stock Exchange took action today designed to bring a free and full play of the spotlight of publicity on corporate earnings statements and balance sheets and to insure greater accuracy in the figures.

In announcing its action the exchange made it clear that a majority of the Nation's leading corporate executives had tendered their moral support to the step. Ten years ago, it was said, such action would have been impossible, but conditions have so changed since then that the exchange's officials forecast a sure success for the project.

Richard Whitney, president of the stock exchange, departed from usual custom and made the announcement before a group of newspapermen who were invited by him to fire away with questions. He explained that the exchange was exercising its authority over its own security-listing privileges as a means of reaching the goal in sight. It lacks power, he added, to tell corporations what to do or not to do, but it can refuse to accept securities of corporations for new listings unless they comply with demands of the exchange.

The new ruling provides that beginning on July 1, next, "all listing applications from corporations must contain the certificate of independent public accountants, qualified under the laws of some State or country, certifying to the correctness of the balance sheet, income statements and surplus statements for the most recent fiscal year."

This ruling, which demands that an audit of the books be made by some agency outside the company, itself, was expected by the exchange to insure full accuracy for the earning statements, and to lead directly to more complete, as well as reliable publicity about the earnings and balance sheet of the company

A few exceptions to the new rule will be permitted, said Mr Whitney, but only a few. The railroads, he said, might reasonably object to going to the expense of an independent audit because they already issue voluminous statements on their earnings in compliance with Interstate Commerce Commission regulations.

Exchange Short Interest Declines in December

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The short interest in the stock market declined slightly in December, the monthly tabulation issued by the exchange showed today.

The total amount of shares in short accounts as of January 3 was 1,796,976, against 1,862,804 on November 28, a reduction of 65,828 shares.

FOREIGN MARKETS.

(Associated Press.)

London—Prices on the stock exchange maintained a good undertone after early irregularity. Renewed support wiped out losses especially in gold mining shares, gilt-edged securities and industrials. The closing was steady with Argentine rails showing advances of about one point.

Paris—Trading on the bourse was largely dominated by the domestic financial situation and was again irregular with initial weakness being shown in rentes. Later dealings were followed by a better tendency and the closing was firm.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse were weak throughout the session and closed lower.

On January 1 last there were listed 1,237 stock issues, aggregating 1,311,881,157 shares, with a total quoted value of $22,767,636,718. Compared to December 1, this is a reduction of five issues and 267,615 shares, but on that date the total quoted value was only $22,259,137,174. CURB PRICES CLIMB IN CLOSING TRADING Utilities Provided Gains as Sales Volume Rises to 190,000 Shares.

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The curb market today found it difficult to pursue an even course in any direction until the last hour, when prices forged ahead rather spiritedly.

Appearance of the late bidding doubtless reflected short covering in anticipation of extended week-end suspension because of the Coolidge funeral. The turnover approximated 190,000 shares compared with 150,000 yesterday.

Utilities accounted for many of the price gains and a considerable share of the trading. Gains running to more than three points were scored by American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share 6 per cent preferred, Columbia Gas & Electric preferred and Cleveland Electric Illuminating. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore issues receded on light selling.

Industrials and specialties gave a good account of themselves. Advances of a point or better were registered in Aluminum Co. of America, Great Atlantic & Pacific, Lerner Stores preferred, Gorham preferred and Sherwin Williams.

Oils showed negligible changes except the relatively inactive Eureka Pipe Line issue which jumped four points. Mining issues were firm, but lightly traded. Newmont and Lake Shore closed a shade higher.

Pennsylvania Road Seen Resuming Its Dividends

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—The Evening Post said today that the Pennsylvania Railroad is expected in reliable quarters to be one of the first important railroads to resume dividend payments. Resumption at a $1 annual rate is expected, it said.

The Pennsylvania earned net income of $10,591,106, equal to 80 cents a share on the outstanding capital stock, in the first ten months of 1932, and it was estimated the road would show earnings of about 94 cents a share for the full year.

The company omitted dividends early last year after an unbroken dividend record extending back to the formation of the company in 1846, the longest record of sustained dividend payments by any railroad in the world.

WHEAT VALUES SOAR ON DEMAND FOR MAY

Proposed Agricultural Bill Also Aided Prices; Oats and Corn Up.

Chicago, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—In a brisk advance, wheat gained 1⅞ cents a bushel today, owing chiefly to speculative purchases intended to anticipate possible price-fixing by Congress.

An amendment to the domestic agricultural allotment bill before the lower House at Washington gave decided impetus to demand for May delivery of wheat. The amendment, if enacted and not vetoed, would grant farmers an arbitrary price of 75 cents a bushel for wheat remaining in their hands at the end of the current crop season, July 1 next.

Wheat closed strong, 1⅞ to 1⅞ above yesterday's finish; corn, ⅝ to ¾ up; oats, ⅜ to ½ advance, and provisions showing 5 to 7 cents gain.

Upward Trend Displayed.

From start to finish the wheat market displayed an upward trend. Friends of higher prices urged that hope of obtaining allotment benefits would intensify holding tactics of farmers, and that the proposal to guarantee 75 cents on all wheat carried over seemed to assure first-hand marketings would be reduced to an absolute minimum. Incidentally it was pointed out that latest unofficial estimates of domestic farm stocks of wheat totaled 217,000,000 bushels.

Despite heavy selling to realize profits on today's bulge in prices, the wheat market closed at the topmost level reached, and well above any previous quotations in nearly a month. A feature of the day's dealings was that May wheat went to a premium over July, although heretofore at a discount.

Corn and oats followed wheat, but were inclined to lag. Shipping demand here for corn was the largest in some time.

Provisions were responsive to hog market upturns.

COTTON GAINS LOST ON SOUTHERN SALES

March Sells at 6.16 as Market Closes 2 Points Down to 4 Up.

New York, Jan. 6 (A.P.).—After holding firm during most of the day, with prices making new high ground for the movement, cotton turned easier in the late trading under realizing and Southern selling.

March contracts, which advanced to 6.25, or 8 points net and higher, to 72 points above the low price of last month, broke to 6.16, with the general market closing barely steady net 2 points lower to 4 points net higher.

The opening was 3 points higher to 3 points lower with near months relatively firm on trade buying. Later deliveries seemed to reflect liquidation through commission houses.

Liverpool Is Seller.

Liverpool was reported a seller here early on differences, but there was buying through houses with Japanese and continental connections, while offerings became very light after the early pressure subsided.

July advanced to 6.50 and prices generally showed net gains of 7 to 11 points with buying encouraged by the steadiness of the grain and stock markets.

The advance was checked by realizing and near the close there was some selling by brokers who sometimes operate for the cooperative interest. This evidently found the demand pretty well supplied, and prices on the more active positions broke 8 or 10 points from the best in the last few minutes.

Buying for Europe.

Brokers with foreign trade connections thought that buying here for European account may have been based partly upon the inflation possibilities but advices from Liverpool said that bullish inflationary sentiment there was tempered by doubts of important developments at this session of Congress and disbelief in the practicality of any acreage reduction plan in time for the next crop.

Other cable advices from Liverpool attributed the steadiness there to trade calling and general buying on the better tone of Manchester. Exports today 45,114, making 4,390,063 so far this season. Port receipts 40,147. U. S. port stocks, 4,767,340.

Cotton seed oil closed steady; prime summer yellow, 3.50; prime crude, 2.37½@2.75. January, 6.35; March, 3.76; May, 3.88; June, 3.88; July, 3.97; August, 403. Sales, 20 contracts.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church Plans 90th Anniversary

The ninetieth anniversary of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Connecticut avenue and Everett street, will be celebrated with a series of special services and meetings beginning tomorrow and continuing throughout the week and following Sunday. Preparations are being made by various committees, under the direction of the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Henry W. Snyder, and the church council.

The sacrament of Holy Communion will be celebrated tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m., the pastor being the celebrant, assisted by the Rev. Prof. W. C. Waltemyer, of Gettysburg College, a former pastor. Dr. Waltemyer will also preach at the evening service. Special music will be rendered by the choir under the direction of Miss Edith Stowell.

An anniversary program is being planned for the Sunday school session at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning under the direction of the general superintendent, Henry C. Brunner. In the evening at 7 o'clock the Christian Endeavor Society and Luther League will have special programs, the Endeavor Society now being in its forty-third year of continuous existence. The children of the Light Brigade will also meet at 7 o'clock under the leadership of Mrs. Howard B. Homer, superintendent.

Tuesday night will be observed as community night, when the neighboring pastors of the Chevy Chase section will speak, and their congregations will be guests of St. Paul's. Thursday night will be observed as congregational fellowship night, featured by special programs, stereopticon views depicting the history of the church, and a social period for members and guests. The celebration will reach its climax on Sunday, January 15, with special liturgical services at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. The Rev. Dr. J. Edward Harms, of Hagerstown, president of the Maryland Synod, will preach in the morning, and Dr. Henry W. Snyder in the evening.

St. Paul's was organized by a group of members from the old Concordia German Lutheran Church, who desired services in the English language. The Maryland Synod fostered the movement, and on October 15, 1842, made an appropriation toward its support, available as soon as an organization could be perfected. Accordingly 40 of the Concordia members banded themselves together, and on January 2, 1843, signed an agreement to form the new congregation. It is the ninetieth anniversary of this event which is now being celebrated.

W. L. Mayo and the Rev. C S. Ridenour, assistants to the rector.

The service begins with the silent assembling of the congregation, choir and clergy in the darkened church. The dim light from the Old Testament prophecies is typified by the flickering flame of a small candle, which appears in the chancel while the rector reads the passages from which the prophecies are taken. As the various prophecies are read the several characters therein are depicted by the lighting of the candles on the nine-branched candelabra. Then are mentioned the seven spirits of God and as each one is named a candle on the seven-branched candelabra is lighted.

The service closes with the apostles leading the members of the congregation into the darkness of the outside world, each person with his candle lighted in typification of personal Christian service.

Christian Science Churches

"Sacrament" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all of the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow.

The golden text is from Hebrews 13:16: "To do good and to communicate forget not, for with such sacrifices God is well pleased."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Then Jesus said unto them, 'Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.' Then said they unto him, 'Lord, evermore, give us this bread.' And Jesus said unto them, 'I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth in me shall never thirst.'" (John 6:32-35.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "To understand all our Master's sayings as recorded in the New Testament, sayings infinitely important, his followers must grow into that stature of manhood in Christ Jesus which enables them to interpret his spiritual meaning. Then they know how Truth casts out error and heals the sick. His words were the offering of his deeds, both of which must be understood." (Page 350.)

CATHEDRAL CHOIR WILL SING CANTATA

"Story of Bethlehem" Will Be Given Tomorrow Afternoon.

Evensong service in the great choir of Washington Cathedral tomorrow, beginning at 4 o'clock, will be devoted to the Christmas cantata, "The Story of Bethlehem," to be rendered by the Cathedral choir of men and boys under the direction of Edgar Priest. With words by Shapcott Wensley and music by John E. West, this short work of sacred music will be one of the special features of the cathedral's program of worship this winter. The service will not be broadcast by radio. There will be ample accommodations for a congregation in excess of 1,000 people, now that new heating facilities have been provided in the Great Choir and the Choir Aisle Chapels of St. Mary and St. John.

The sermon at the service of morning prayer and Holy Communion in the great choir at 10:30 o'clock will be delivered by the Rev. Dr G. Freeland Peter, canon and chancellor of the cathedral. There will be the usual celebration of the Holy Communion in the Bethlehem Chapel at 7:30 o'clock.

Pilgrimages for out-of-town visitors and local residents will be held under the direction of Canon John W. Gummere immediately following the morning and afternoon services in the great choir. Visitors to the National Capital and local residents who have not yet formed any parish connections are cordially invited to participate in these services and pilgrimages.

The Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, famous Dominican preacher, who is giving a series of sermons in the Immaculate Conception Church, Eighth and N streets northwest, on "Christ and the Delusions of 1933," on Sunday afternoons of January and February at 5 o'clock, has announced that he will conduct at these services a "Question Box," in which all questions addressed to him and concerning any phase of Catholic doctrine, will be answered at the end of the discourse each Sunday afternoon. These discourses are broadcast directly from the church every Sunday afternoon through Station WOL. 40 BBLS. sweet cider, $10 a barrel, barrel included. John Windolph, Dawsonville, Md.

A BOLT of lightning failed to make Red Murray, New York Giants' outfielder, drop the high center field fly he caught at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, on July 17, 1914, to end the Giants-Pirates game in the twenty-first inning. It was a victory, 3 to 1, for the Giants.

The Giants went to bat to start the twenty-first inning, with the score tied 1 to 1, and made two runs, moving ahead of the Pirates. Of the first four men up for the Pirates in the last half of the inning, two were out on flies, and two hit singles. When the fifth man came up there were two down, and runners on first and third. The sky was overcast and flashes of lightning seen from time to time.

The batter hit a high fly into Murray's territory. Murray caught it, but an instant later a bolt of lightning struck near him. When the base umpire, the first man to reach him, came to Murray, he was unconscious on the ground—but still held the ball, and the game was over.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

TECHNOCRACY.

TECHNOCRACY is the talk of the country. Nothing like it has swept the Nation since Tom Thumb golf, the flat hip movement and the idea that all common stocks were going to 300.

• • • •

Technocracy reads like the phonographic record of a joint debate between Prof. Einstein, Henry Ford, Ely Culbertson, Theodore Dreiser and Gracie Allen played with a defective needle.

• • • •

The widespread interest is due to the fact that millions of people think it has something to do with the new contract bridge rules.

• • • •

It is really an idea for restoring prosperity by scrapping all the old ingredients including bankers, industrialists, economists, politicians, credit, the stock market and the point after touchdown. The country would be operated by a board of engineers and a set of blueprints.

• • • •

• • • •

The technocrats hold that we are in the rough today because of overproduction. We have too many factories and too many machines, even when business is good. They would junk the old system and begin all over again under new rules, and with no industrialists, bankers or politicians in the line-up.

• • • •

There would be an entirely new unit of value based on energy. A survey of energy in North America is now being taken by the technocrats. It will show that 90 per cent of the energy in this country today is being expended on golf links, bonus armies and the preparation of letters to newspapers.

• • • •

Technocrats say that male adults working only four hours a day four days a week could produce a standard of living ten times higher than during the boom era. And every man would have a vacation of eight weeks a year, probably at some shore resort where all the present-day industrialists would be beachcombers.

• • • •

The four-hour day would reduce the country's energy surplus, but the per capita supply would remain about the same, due to mortality from gout.

• • • •

It is the eight-weeks' vacation idea that hits the popular fancy. What could be sweeter when down in a ditch laying new water pipes than to have the boss pipe: "Come on up, Mike! It's time for your eight weeks at Miami Beach!"

• • • •

Four hours a day, four days a week and eight weeks to get a proper body tan! Bring on technocracy!

• • • •

BIG LEAGUE STUFF.

Franklin D. Roosevelt is out as Governor and has nothing to do until he takes over the Presidency. In the next three months he will know exactly how a rookie pitcher feels when he leaves Woonsocket to join a big league team during a series with the Yanks.

A LONG-LIVED DELUSION.

John D. Rockefeller has resumed golf at Ormond Beach. He is now 93 years old, which just goes to show that nobody ever gets rid of the idea it is a game that can be mastered if one keeps at it long enough.

APPRAISING THE PRETZEL.

Senator Dill proposes that the Senate serve three-point-two beer to a selected group and see whether it intoxicates the boys or not. While he is at it he might as well determine the caloric value of a pretzel.

Any suggestion that the beer be served to a committee of Senators will be probably rejected. There is no way of determining when a Senator is sober.

P. U. C. Approves Sale Of Trolley Track Equity

Approval of the purchase by the Washington Railway & Electric Co., of R. L. May's half interest in the street railway tracks on Fourteenth street between Water street and Pennsylvania avenue was announced yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

The tracks were formerly used partly by the Mount Vernon, Alexandria & Washington Railway, now superseded by a bus line. The purchase price was said to be $16,000, and the Washington company agreed to stand good for any claims involving the trackage.

SENATORS ARE TOLD 'GOING CONCERN' IS BAR TO GAS MERGER

Howell, Once Chief of Plant in Omaha, Will Inspect Works Today.

Wilton J. Lambert, counsel for the Washington Gas Light Co. and the Georgetown Gas Light Co., yesterday told the Senate District committee he saw no way the companies can accept the pending bill to merge them, if the Senate insists on excluding "going concern" from valuation of properties.

Senator Robert B. Howell (Republican), Nebraska, who asked the committee to amend the bill so "going concern" value would not be taken into account, today will begin a personal inspection of the local gas company plants.

Howell, an engineer, formerly managed the municipally owned Omaha gas works. He wants to find what specific savings will accrue from the consolidation. Chairman Mason M. Patrick of the Public Utilities Commission at noon today will give him a detailed estimate of the $50,000 he thinks would be saved.

Two Alternatives Suggested.

Howell yesterday suggested two alternatives to the committee: First, report favorably the merger bill with addition of the "going concern" amendment, or, second, allow the companies to consolidate only, without granting any privileges of stock issuance provided under the present bill.

Lambert said there would be no "bargaining" on the part of the companies to bring about the merger, after People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech and the Nebraska senator outlined their proposed amendment. The attorney reiterated his contention that the proposal is "unconstitutional."

Chairman Patrick, Commissioner Riley Elgin and Assistant Corporation Counsel William A. Roberts made a plea for the bill as drafted. They declared it "in the public interest." Elgin pointed to the large amount of gas bonds outstanding, represent 83 per cent of the companies' total capital. He said additional stock should be authorized to retire some bonds, permit improvements and bring about a 50-50 balance between stock and bonded capital.

$8,500,000 Bond Issue.

Keech answered that stock can not be successfully marketed at this time anyway, and pointed to the Public Utility Commission's action yesterday in authorizing a new $8,500,000 bond issue, which he said obviated the immediate need of a new stock issue.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, said he believed the public would be better off under the proposed bill than it would under the existing situation. He said he thought it would secure economies that might reflect themselves in rate reductions and improvements.

Action Next Week.

Howell countered, however, that the Washington public had contributed the "going concern" value, and were entitled to a reduction in valuation which might bring them further reduction in rates.

"Here is an opportunity to get a little equity for the people in Washington," he said, adding that profits on the original investment in the properties "have been enormous."

Chairman Arthur Capper said the committee would delay action until next week.

D. C. Workers Getting Veterans' Benefit Listed

District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan yesterday asked the department heads of the District government to report the names of all employes who are receiving monetary benefits from the Veterans' Administration.

The request was made at the instance of the joint congressional committee on veterans' affairs. A similar survey is being made of Federal employes.

Groceries worth $15 were stolen from the Sanitary Grocery Store at 1608 K street. The glass in the front door was broken.

Russian Streets Now Nearly Bare of Autos

Imagine Washington without automobiles. Such an imaginary picture would give some idea of a street scene in Leningrad, Moscow or many other Soviet cities recently visited by Carveth Wells, famous world traveler, who described to members of the National Geographic Society at the Washington Auditorium last night some of his observations while traveling from Leningrad to Mount Ararat.

Broad thoroughfares of Russian cities that once had their modern traffic problems are almost devoid of vehicles. Automobiles are such a luxury that the few that are in evidence carry tourists and are owned by tourist agencies. Now and then a drosky, or taxi, comes into view, but it is an expensive means of transport. Mr. Wells said a drosky driver attempted to charge him $20 to ride eight blocks in Moscow.

Russians either walk or use the trolley cars to get to their destinations. Despite the lack of wheeled traffic, however, Russian street corners are policed by uniformed men who operate modern traffic signals.

Motion pictures illustrating Mr. Wells' remarks showed how many of the peasants now are in desperate need.

In south Russia, he said, the Soviet system is weaker than in the north. Markets are almost unknown in Moscow and street vendors are seldom seen. In Tiflis and other southern cities, however, Mr. Wells showed pictures of markets and sidewalk industries. In the mountains of Transcaucasia he visited the Khevsurs, who claim to be descendants of the Crusaders. In their mountain retreat, they have not been touched by the Soviet system. Self-sustaining, they have little, if any, commercial intercourse outside their tribal village which is carved into the side of the mountains.

BOND PERMIT GIVEN GAS LIGHT COMPANY

Utilities Board Passes Plan Calling for Sale of $8,500,000 Issue.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday authorized the Washington Gas Light Co. to issue and sell $8,500,000 of its refunding mortgage gold bonds, bearing 5 per cent interest and falling due in 1958. The commission specified that they should be sold at not less than 90¼, although the gas company in its application specified a minimum of 89.

Proceeds from the sale of these bonds are to be used for the following purposes:

To pay $4,000,000 Series A ten-year 6 per cent mortgage gold bonds dated April 2, 1923, and due April 1, 1933.

To pay $3,000,000 4½ per cent notes dated December 1, 1930, and due April 1, 1933.

To partially reimburse the gas company for expenditures for the acquisitions of new property, extensions, improvements, &c., made prior to December 1, 1932, properly chargeable to capital account and for the repayment of part of bank loans incurred for such expenses.

As security for the bonds, the gas company proposes to issue an open-end mortgage or deed of trust upon all of its property and privileges, legally subject to such attachment providing for the issuance of bonds in series from time to time, upon such terms as may be fixed by the directors with the approval of the commission.

The gas company proposes to issue additional capital stock if the merger bill now pending in Congress is enacted, so as to balance its financial structure, now made of 83 per cent bonds and 17 per cent stock.

LOCATION FOR BRYAN MEMORIAL IS PICKED

Statue Will Be Erected in West Potomac Park; Already Cast.

The memorial to the late William Jennings Bryan, famous statesman and orator, will be erected in West Potomac Park, 150 feet north of Constitution avenue near the Lincon Memorial, it was decided yesterday by the Fine Arts Commission.

The design for the air-mail fliers medal of honor, made by Walter Hancock, of New York, was given final approval. The medal, under the act of Congress authorizing it, will be given by the President for distinguished service by air-mail pilots.

The commission also conferred with E. W. Donn and Horace Peaslee, architects, on methods of guidance for Capital architects or builders, so that they may keep within the regulations imposed by a recent act of Congress, which gives the Fine Arts Commission a limited control over designs for private property.

Hanna Says Share Work Saved 1,200

Traction Speaker Praises Plan and Urges Its General Use.

The "share-the-work" movement saved the jobs of 1,200 workers in the Capital during the past year, John H. Hanna, president of the Capital Traction Co., told the Advertising Club of Washington at a Raleigh Hotel meeting.

So that more jobs could be saved and more persons reemployed, Mr. Hanna urged that the program be adopted by more District business institutions. A survey of 75 employers here showed 75 per cent had adopted the job-saving program, he said.

Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, of the emergency relief committee of the Board of Public Welfare, disclosed that all committee relief funds are exhausted.

Dean Wants Board to Hear Plea for Boxing in Schools

The opportunity of appearing before the Board of Education when it considers the application of Columbus University for permission to use the McKinley High School Gymnasium for intercollegiate boxing matches was asked yesterday by Dean John R. Fitzpatrick in a letter to the board.

He also asked the privilege of appearing before the committee on buildings and grounds of the board, which has once rejected the request, but which is now reconsidering the application. He urges that he be heard by the committee before it concludes its findings.

The decision of the board is expected to be made public at its meeting next Wednesday. That the board act favorably on the application was urged in a letter by William E. Leahy, president of Columbus University.

In his letter, Mr. Leahy pointed out that unless the application is favorably acted upon the university probably will be forced to abandon its activities in that particular field of sport.

INQUEST SET TODAY IN SLAYING OF MAN AND TWO CHILDREN

2 Boys Who Escaped Shots of Uncle Tell of Killings; He Asks Death.

Coroner Joseph D. Rogers will conduct an inquest over the bodies of Silas O. Donaldson, 43 and his two children, George, 18, and Mary, 14, today at 11 o'clock, when a coroner's jury will listen to the testimony of Charles C. Donaldson, 48, murderer of the three, homicide detectives and witnesses.

Donaldson, employed as night fireman at police headquarters, shot and killed his brother and the latter's son and daughter in the Donaldson home at 923 Maryland avenue southwest Thursday night.

Children Tell Story.

According to the two Donaldson children who were not hit by flying bullets, Allen, 7, and Luttrell, 11, their uncle broke into their room brandishing two long-barreled revolvers shouting: "If you are going to move, you had better do it now."

George, the first to be awakened by the crash of the door being broken open, jumped out of bed and started toward his uncle, whereupon Donaldson fired, the bullet striking the boy in the neck. He was killed almost instantly.

Mary, who came to her brother's aid, was shot in the stomach, and died on the way to Emergency Hospital shortly afterward.

Two Boys Escape.

Mrs. Donaldson, widow of the dead man, then told police what happened after her brother-in-law left the children's room. She said she was awakened by a crash and then a series of shots. She got out of bed and ran to the foot of the stairs just as the killer started the descent, revolvers smoking in his hands.

Silas Donaldson then appeared at the foot of the steps, and the sight of him there with a pen knife, grabbed from a table in his bedroom, apparently maddened his brother who fired at him, the bullet entering his temple.

The two younger children escaped, Allen by crawling under the bed and Luttrell by climbing out of a second story window.

No amount of grilling could wring any statement from the man, except that he asked to be either hung or electrocuted for the crimes.

Man Lacking Tag Cash Caught in Parking Net

Knowing it to be against the law to run with 1932 tags, Herman K. Phillips, owner of an automobile, permitted his machine to remain in front of his home until he could procure tags.

In the meantime a policeman noticed the machine in the same parking space for eighteen hours, so he issued a ticket. Yesterday Phillips appeared in Police Court, and after he had explained his dilemma he was given his freedom on personal bonds.

SMITHSONIAN GOES INTO BYWAY PATHS TO GET NEW FACTS

Institution's Workers Add Important Knowledge in Many Fields.

Obscure paths in the exploration of life have been followed during the year by Smithsonian Institution scientists, according to the annual report of the National Museum, a governmentally supported branch of the institution.

The museum workers not only have made important contributions to the world's knowledge of mammals, birds, and fishes, but also have conducted equally important taxonomic studies of such living things as snails, echinoderms, bryozoa, corals, sponges, parasitic worms, and various marine invertebrates. The essential object is to discover and make known what living things actually exist. Any one of these at any time may take on definite and considerable importance to human welfare.

Travels in Siberia.

One worker, awarded the Walter Rathbone Bacon traveling scholarship of the Smithsonian Institution has traveled in Siberia, where he is making a comprehensive study of the land and fresh-water mollusks. Alan Mozley, holder of this scholarship, is exploring the steppes and river basins for new varieties of snails and other molluscan fauna.

Two associates, W. G. Sheldon and Richard Borden, undertook an expedition in the Peace River country of British Columbia in search of a peculiar form of mountain sheep. They secured for the museum collections 146 mammals. In Siam Dr. Hugh M. Smith, former Commissioner of Fisheries, continued explorations throughout the year. His collections of vertebrates and mollusks contained many forms new to science. Other enterprises consisted of an exploration of the Gaspe Peninsula, of eastern Quebec, in search of insects, an expedition to fossil beds in Montana and Wyoming, and an expedition to study the extinct mammal fauna of Puerto Rico. Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, collected birds in the Bear River marshes at the northern end of Great Salt Lake.

Four Climes Explored.

The department of anthropology conducted explorations in Alaska, Texas, Arizona and Cuba, besides carrying on studies of primitive man in Europe in cooperation with the University of Toulouse.

Although scientific research is one object of the museum, it has also an important educational mission, the report points out. During the year a total of 1,630,030 persons visited the exhibits. Type material was furnished colleges, other museums and individual workers in the United States and other countries.

Seal Is Reinstated As Public Counsel

Commissioners Retain Him After Resignation Is Requested.

Elwood Seal was reinstated as assistant corporation counsel yesterday by the District Commissioners, with the consent of Corporation Counsel William W. Bride, after the former had agreed not to represent clients in any case in which the District government was interested.

The resignation of Mr. Seal was demanded last Wednesday, when Mr. Bride learned that his assistant had represented the Marathon Exhibition Co., Inc., in District Supreme Court against the All States Hotel, which sought an injunction to stop a marathon dance contest then in progress at the Washington Auditorium. The Commissioners had made previous attempts to prohibit the dance.

Mr. Seal had never actually left his post, which he took temporarily to fill a vacancy caused by the prolonged illness of Thomas P. Cameron. A number of persons interceded with the Commissioners and Mr. Bride in his behalf after his resignation had been asked, but Mr. Seal explained that he made no effort whatsoever to retain the appointment.

TRAFFIC TOLL TO DATE.

Automobiles running at night with only one headlight are a worse menace than cars with no lights at all.

Of the many accidents attributable to this source the majority of them have been fatal. Motorists driving with only one headlight, and that one usually the left one, for some strange reason, are courting sure death. If you are driving on a narrow road with one light out and another car approaches from the opposite direction, the driver of that car is liable to presume that your car is a motorcycle and that he has plenty of room to pass.

The traffic authorities apparently are rather lax with regard to this matter for there are quite a number of motorists riding around Washington at night with only one headlight.

The accident figures are:

	1932.	1933.
Deaths	1	1
Injuries	61	37
Accidents	111	62

"Be Careful!"

MRS. NORTON FLAYS CHARITY'S RED TAPE

Shoe-Relief Speaker Urges More Footwear Gifts and Humanity.

Slashing of charity red tape, so that Washington's poor can be helped at the time they most need it, was urged last night by Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District committee, in a radio appeal in behalf of "The Old Woman Who Lives in a Shoe" relief organization, of 727 Seventeenth street northwest.

She asked contributions of shoes so that the relief unit can go through with its plan to distribute 10,000 pairs in 1933 to all the needy who apply.

"Red tape means delay, and delay prolongs misery and suffering," said Mrs. Norton, asserting that the group for which she spoke distributed aid "without humiliating and without delay."

"We need a lot of relief of that nature in these times of extraordinary distress," she said, "organizations that place the human element above the matter of dollars and cents."

She added:

"A case came to my attention during the holidays where a poor family went without Christmas dinner because of the bungling stupidity of a relief investigator. The father, it seems, had worked last in a neighboring town. The investigator denied him aid on that account. The place where he was last employed advised him to seek relief in the community of his residence.

"Thus as the buck was passed between two relief agencies, one family went hungry on the greatest holiday of the year. What difference does it make where a man worked last, or where he lives or has lived, if he is in our midst with a hungry family."

Coolidge Memorial Held at Cathedral

Bishop Extols Virtues of Former President in Prayer Service.

A memorial service of music and prayer was held in the great choir of the Washington Cathedral yesterday in commemoration of Calvin Coolidge, former President of the United States. The Right Rev. Dr. James Edward Freeman, Bishop of Washington, conducted the services.

The Cathedral choir and the church organist opened the service with "O, Rest in the Lord," from Mendelssohn's oratorio, "Elijah." Following this selection the choir sang the twenty-third psalm, "The Lord Is My Shepherd."

Bishop Freeman in his address said in part: "Beyond all the honors and emoluments he had from his fellows, he coveted most a conscience void of offense. Honesty, integrity, simplicity, loyalty, he exemplified these virtues and wore them as a shining armor, witnessing before men to those enduring qualities that alone constitute the elements of true greatness."

MOVE FOR FURTHER RENT ADJUSTMENTS IN D.C. IS DISCLOSED

Real Estate Board Counsel Reveals Plan at Session With Owners.

A movement for further rent adjustments already has started upon the part of property owners and brokers, it was revealed last night at a meeting of those classes with members of the Washington Real Estate Board at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

The revelation was made by Roger J. Whiteford, counsel for the board, who appeared for it at the rent hearings before the subcommittee of the Senate District committee. It came at the close of the meeting held to discuss possibilities of further rental reductions in the District.

Sentiment Favors Action.

Mr. Whitford said he had found that sentiment of real estate brokers and owners, both members and non-members of the board, favored action to bring about such reductions in rent as will meet the needs of the rent-paying community and at the same time enable property owners to retain their properties by deriving sufficient income to meet carrying charges.

Although not indicated, it is believed that the real estate board which urged attendance at last night's meeting as a civic obligation and which is deeply interested in a suitable solution of the problem, may assist in the fostering of this sentiment.

Capper and Copeland Speak.

The announcement followed addresses by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, two members of the rental investigation committee both of whom indicated that some local rents still are too high.

Informing the meeting that he was giving only his personal view, and that he did not know what his committee may report to the Senate next Tuesday, or what recommendations may be made, Senator Capper said he had some pretty definite ideas on what should be reported, but could not discuss them at the time. Then he added: "In my opinion, I think the investigation very clearly disclosed that many rentals charged are entirely too high."

Senator Copeland, in his address said he thought the report of Senator Capper should be the foundation of the committee's report, later adding that he indorsed every word his colleague said, and that it was the sentiment of every member of the committee. In complimenting the representatives of the Real Estate Board at the hearing, he said: Your officers have made a good defense of a poor case."

Varied Returns Cited.

What the interested owners and brokers will seek to accomplish is a "straightening of the line in local rents." Discussing the report of Rufus S. Lusk, statistician of the board in the hearings, Senator Copeland commented on the remarkable difference in returns on the part of properties presented by his figures, some being "in the red," some showing less than 5 or 6 per cent, but others showing 10, 11, 12 per cent and even more.

A medical man, Senator Copeland remarked that such fluctuations if recorded by a line on a patient's chart would show an unhealthy condition, and urged that a straightened line in local rents should be the objective. Congress,
